Now that he's leaving: McQuillan looks back

By Neil Fater

The very day Mark McQuillan interviewed for a new position in Andover four years ago, his then 8-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, was admitted to a hospital. Shortly thereafter, as Dr. McQuillan was named superintendent here, Elizabeth began treatment for a serious kidney ailment.

Much has happened to Mark McQuillan and Andover schools since that interview four years ago, and little of it has come easily.

Woodchucks: Critter problems

Showdown in Woodchuck City:
Fearing rabies, residents begin killing woodchucks.

By Don Staruk

A group of Elm Street residents began catching and killing woodchucks in their neighborhood this week after one of the animals scratched a 4-year-old boy last week and the town wouldn't do anything about the infestation problem.

But after failing to find a humane way to kill the first Christy Fiorentino and Colleen Griffin have great hearts for homeless animals.

These 9-year-olds have spent the past year collecting money from their classmates and relatives for homeless dogs, cats, horses, sheep, goats and even a foal born last Thursday.

Last week, they took their well-crafted shoebox bank, deco-

Here's how her garden grows

By Neil Fater

Down on Chestnut Street, hidden back away from the road, is a garden thick with flowers, herbs and folklore. According to legend, the garden is populated by fairies and has ties to the Renaissance, the great pyramids and the Battle of Troy.

It is a garden tied to mysticism.

"There's a large and crazy rose way down at the end of the property," said Betsy Williams, owner of the garden. "This rose is so ancient it doesn't have any pedigree, it's just listed as ancient. I got it from California."

The branches of the fragrant rosebush are so twisted and covered with thorns that even the well-meaning are often kept away.

Vandalism

Last week, benches were torn up in The Park and obscenities were written inside the gazebo. The town spent more than $40,000 ($15,000-plus of it at AHS) repairing vandalized property this fiscal year.

Helping non-profits work effectively

In Andover, hundreds of people volunteer thousands of hours a year to support non-profit organizations. With this issue the Townsman begins a continuing series of short stories about some of the volunteers. Organizations and individuals nominated and wrote about the individuals. The series begins with Joan Sweeney because she received the most nominations.

Joan Sweeney

If you have ever asked yourself, "How did I get myself into this?" then you know someone like Joan Sweeney. If you have ever moved a picnic table down a rock face because "it would

Total quality parking

A new way of painting parking spaces results in more available parking

By Don Staruk

There may be a few more parking spaces available, and fewer tickets issued in downtown Andover due to the application of a little common sense on the part of Patrolman Joseph Ouellette and the town.

Patrolman Ouellette, whose regular beat is foot patrol in the Central Business District, noticed that the length of the parallel-parking spaces along Main Street varied in size — some were longer than necessary for most of today's smaller cars.

In some cases, one car was parked in a space almost big enough for two cars. In other cases, an effort by motorists to squeeze a second car into one space resulted in cars parked over the dividing lines between the spaces, protruding into another space or a crosswalk.

Patrolman Ouellette realized that by getting rid of the dividing lines between the individual spaces, and just painting one straight line, parallel to the sidewalk, on the outside of the space, to keep cars from sticking out into traffic, motorists could then make use of the available space without risking getting a ticket.

And that's the way the lines were painted earlier this month. The result should be better use of parking space in the CBD and fewer disgruntled shoppers going home with parking tickets.

Lt. Phil Froburg, the department's operations division commander, said Officer Ouellette's seeing the problem and recommending a solution was an example of Total Quality Management at work in the police department. It shows that the officers are out there to solve all kinds of problems, in addition to criminal ones, the lieutenant said.

Clarification

[Editor's note: In a story last week about downtown traffic there was a photo of Patrolman Ouellette crossing the street in the middle of traffic, not in a crosswalk. Although the caption of the photo did not say the officer was jaywalking, the implication might have been that he was. Obviously police officers often have to cross the street in a hurry in the line of duty and sometimes, therefore, don't cross in a crosswalk.]

Arrest made in Tuesday house break on Chandler Road

By Don Staruk

Police arrested one man and were looking for a second in connection with a house break that occurred on Chandler Road Tuesday, June 28.

Phouthana Inthirath, 17, of Billerica, was arrested and charged with breaking and entering in the daytime. Police were still looking for the second man Wednesday morning.

A resident reported seeing two suspicious youths enter the house, which is at River Road end of Chandler Road, at 12:24 p.m. Tuesday.

When police arrived, the two ran out the back door and into the woods. Police found a crow bar on the edge of the woods, but couldn't find the two suspects, despite an effort by several officers who converged on the area.

But a car left near the house and thought to have belonged to the suspects was towed to the police station for evidence. Evidence in the car led to the arrest of Mr. Inthirath.

IN THE SERVICE

Pfc. Erik Donovan Ralston, A 1993 graduate of Andover High School, is stationed at the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center at Twenty-Nine Palms, Calif.

His platoon recently won the 1st Marine Division 81mm mortar competition, to become the top 81's Marine Corps platoon in the Western United States.

The competition began with a full battle gear forced march in 110-degree heat to a point where the mortar team was judged how quickly and accurately it could hit designated targets. This "mission" continued into the evening with illuminated night shots being tested.

Pfc. Ralston is a member of the 81mm mortar platoon in Weapons Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Marines. The mortar platoon serves as the primary source of support to the rifle company in the Corps.

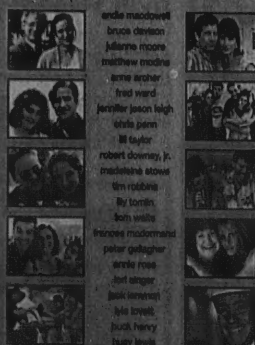

Pfc. Ralston graduated from boot camp in December at Parris Island, S.C., and received advanced infantry training in Camp Lejeune, N.C. He is scheduled to leave for Okinawa, Japan in November.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Town to enforce junk-car bylaw

At the request of the town manager, the building inspector's office will start the annual enforcement of the zoning bylaw that calls for the removal of "unregistered and/or junk cars."

Vehicles that are not currently registered and inspected cannot not be stored within view of any public way or abutting residential property, unless one of the following exceptions applies:

a. One unregistered but operable vehicle may be stored in public view on a lot if it can be demonstrated that the vehicle was registered and passed inspection within the 12-month period from the date on which the owner of the vehicle is issued written notice that the vehicle may be in violation.

b. The vehicle is covered with a standard vehicle cover of a type manufactured and sold for that purpose.

A vehicle not in condition for travel is one that is in such disrepair that it is inoperable and/or is undergoing major repairs. The vehicle has to be removed from public view or from the premises within 48 hours of receipt of written notice from the building inspector.

League plans Know Your Town Fair

The League of Women Voters of Andover will hold a Know Your Town Fair Saturday, Sept. 17, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Old Town Hall on Main Street. All organizations and clubs in Andover looking for new members or wanting to let townspeople know what they do are invited to give out information about their goals and events.

In anticipation of Andover's 350th anniversary, the League is organizing a series of activities to bring the town together and strengthen the climate for community awareness and responsibility. The Know Your Town Fair is the first activity. It is free and all are welcome.

Groups must sign up with Know Your Town committee chairwoman Tina Girdwood by Friday, July 15. Call 475-5253.

PALS seeks people's discarded tennis rackets

PALS, an educational enrichment program for 55 sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders from the Leonard School in Lawrence will begin its sixth summer program on the Phillips Academy campus July 6-29. After intensive math, computer instruction and writing exercises, the students are coached in tennis, basketball and track.

Half the students choose tennis. Tom Cone, PALS director, is appealing for donations of tennis racquets people no longer need. His phone is 470-0668.

Mail-in voter registration set July 1

In order for the state to comply with the Federal Registration Law, better known as "The Motor Voter Law," the state has passed legislation to adjust its general laws to allow for implementation, said Town Clerk Randy Hanson.

A piece of this legislation involves the passage of the mail-in voter registration form that will be available for statewide use on July 1.

The forms will be available at the town clerk's office and treasurer's office in town offices at 36 Bartlet St.; the children's section and main floor of Memorial Hall Library; Senior Center at Whittier Court; Andover Housing Authority, 100 Morton St.; post offices on Main Street, Stevens Street, Shaw-sheen and Ballardvale stations; and the facilities coordinator's office at Old Town Hall on Main Street.

Residents can use these forms for new voter registration and also to change an address, make party changes, or name changes.

Applicants will mail the completed form to the town clerk's office for processing and review by the Board of Registrars.

Those who have registered to vote in a community in Massachusetts remain registered unless residency is broken by registering in another community or failing to respond to the annual census and the drop notices that follows a non-response to the census.

The last day for unregistered voters to register to vote for the Sept. 20 primary is Aug. 23.

For information on mail-in registration or voter registration status, call the town clerk's office at 470-3800.

Cholesterol clinic scheduled for July 13

The simple fingerstick test for total cholesterol costs $5 and does not require fasting. The program includes dietary counseling by the public health nurse and referral to a person's private physician for follow-up care as needed.

For more information or an appointment, call the health department at 470-3800, Ext. 255.

Joan Sweeney

work better at the bottom," then you know someone like Joan Sweeney. If you have ever taken large groups of children to the grocery store "because they need a real life experience," then you know someone like Joan Sweeney. If you have donated more money and more time to more organizations than you can recall, well, my friend, you must know Joan Sweeney.

What is it about certain people that just brings out the best in those around them? How do people inspire others to do and to be their best? Many people volunteer in the community and make wonderful contributions, but Ms. Sweeney manages to inspire others to participate at a level they would never have anticipated - and with great joy and gusto.

She often will tell someone, "You'd be good at this or that" and she believes it, and you are. Inspiration is a gift. Joie de Vie is infectious.

Ms. Sweeney has demonstrated over many years a belief that people are good and that they really do want to help. Positive people get things done and attract other positive people to help.

Sir Winston Churchill once said, "You make a living by what you earn, you make a life by what you give." To give of oneself freely to help another is the role of a volunteer. Ms. Sweeney has the ability to create ideas, develop and implement these ideas, and motivate individuals to support these ideas. She has vision.

Although we are sure Ms. Sweeney volunteered help before this, she seems to have cut her teeth at the Community Cooperative Nursery School where she served for six years in various parental roles. With Lauren, Ms. Sweeney and her husband, Kevin's, eldest daughter entering high school this year, Kristin going into seventh grade and Shannon entering fifth, it has been some time since pre-school, and yet Ms. Sweeney has enduring friendships from those early days. These friends can expect to hear from Ms. Sweeney when she needs co-workers.

Much of the community service Ms. Sweeney leads involve her children. She has been a Scout leader for many years, has led two troops at once and has had a troop of more than 40. She demonstrates flexibility and a sense of empowerment with the children that attracts people.

The Sweeneys are generous. Kevin Sweeney is often thrust into the role as support person, picking up the forgotten necessity, the person without a ride, the checkbook. Fortunately, he is as dedicated as she.

This fall, Ms. Sweeney ran the silent auction for the very successful Habitat for Humanity gala at Phillips' Addison Gallery.

Joan Sweeney

She has also supported the Samaritans by helping to plan their art auction fund-raiser during the last three years.

Ms. Sweeney is equally at home covered in soot from a campfire, sunburned from a canoe trip or dressed to the nines at the Ritz. Les Dames d'Escoffier, an international culinary arts philanthropy providing scholarships, has benefited from her talent as well.

This October, she is organizing a conference in Boston that will include brunch with Julia Child in her Cambridge home. At this year's Clown Town - Ms. Sweeney's been an Andona member for many years - she cooked hot dogs while wearing huge plastic sunglasses that squirted water at passersby. Jolie de Vie!

And by the way, she has a paid job, too. She works for Ted Sullivan, a developer, the other 40 hours a week.

She spearheaded

West Middle School's successful West Fest. For three years she has worked with Odyssey of the Mind, an international problem-solving organization for kindergartners through college-age students. She has coached teams for three years and brought the concept to the middle school. "I'll just have to view this as an Odyssey problem," Ms. Sweeney would say about West Fest. "There has to be a way, the kids really want it," and there was a way.

Ms. Sweeney is the Sanborn School PTO president, where she leads by example. She is on the board at West Middle School. She helped institute Spring Fling, a substance-free celebration at the YMCA this past year, served as precinct captain during the school building program initiative, serves on the Townwide PTO, has been involved in town political campaigns, and more.

Retired nurse, Clare Sack - faithful volunteer

The Professional Center Development Day Program-Early Intervention Program nominates Clare Sack of 10 Essex St., a retired nurse who volunteers at the Professional Center's Developmental Day Program three days a week. She has been doing this faithfully since 1987. This represents a commitment of 15 hours a week for seven years.

Ms. Sack works in a classroom with nine multiply handicapped children, ages 18 months to 7 years. She assists teachers, therapists and nurses with all the many activities required to provide these students with appropriate educational and therapeutic programming. In addition, she provides for these children a loving and nurturing environment. Ms. Sack has developed close attachments to several children over the years, which has contributed not only to their growth and development but has provided special meaning to their families.

"We have come to rely on Clare as a regular member of our staff. Her com-

SHED may locate in center with Youth Council

By Neil Fater

The Youth Council is considering a proposal by Shawsheen Extended Day Program and Kid's Club to create a comprehensive, and ultimately K-12, activity center in Recreation Park.

Acceptance of the proposal will mean a year or two from now:

- The school system will be without the revenue generated by the Kid's Club before and after-school programs.

- The center will have built-in funds through Kid's Club to keep it operational.

- Scheduling of activities will be needed to allow optimum, shared usage of the facility by all age groups, and;

- There will likely be an expansion of after-school programs to the middle-school level.

The concern of the Youth Council appears to be that the space remain available to them and not be taken over by the SHED and Kid's Club activities.

Sydney Bialo, SHED administrator, said the plan calls for some shared gym, kitchen and administrative office space, but that the older teens and younger students will each have separate areas, and likely be their for different time periods.

"We could have space for our program on one side of the building in a wing. We have a lot of teen-agers who volunteer for us," she said. "Those who want to volunteer can get involved and those who don't, don't even have to see them."

"I think philosophically we are a lot alike," said Bill Fahey, youth services coordinator. We're "giving young people positive alternatives, giving them a flexible, wide-range of activities."

The future placement of the Kid's Club before- and after-school programs has been in question since the School Committee effectively rejected a request April 26 to use West Middle School space for the grades 3-5 programs.

Next year, the kindergarten program will continue to be offered in the portable classroom next to Shawsheen School. Activities for grades 1 and 2 will almost certainly be housed in Shawsheen's art and music rooms and in what will be their cafeteria next year, according to SHED administrators.

However, the placement of programs for grades 3-5 is still uncertain, although Kid's Club retains the option to utilize gym space at Shawsheen. The School Committee rejected the West Middle School plan because its members want the middle school to be available for middle-school activities. However, Sam Campbell is the only principal who came forward to offer the programs space.

"The other schools truly don't have the space from what I can gather," said Ms. Bialo. "It seemed the School Committee would have liked to have been involved sooner, although I don't think it would have changed their opinion."

The School Committee does want to keep the SHED and Kid's Club programs in the schools because they are popular programs and generate revenue for the system.

In their three years, the programs' contribution to the schools has grown from $35,000 to $45,000 to an expected $60,000 this year.

"If they're not using our facilities we certainly can't get any money from them so that would not be the preferred solution," said Lloyd Willey, committee member. "But I can't rule it out because there may not be another solution."

The School Committee is also looking at offering after-school programs of their own, which in all likelihood will be run by Andover teachers. At the April 26 meeting, Tom Meyers, president of the teachers union, said the committee should not be discussing after-school activities because that is a collective bargaining issue. The teachers are currently negotiating a new contract.

"I personally don't think they have any idea what they are getting into. It's different than a school day program, very different. And it's different than an indoor recess," said Ms. Bialo. "It sounds like some teachers want to get involved with this."

Ms. Bialo said, in her opinion, the work involved in preparing both a school day and an after-school program will be to great.

"If we can work out the youth center plans it would give us a dedicated space for the children of the community. That would be the best way to go for a long-range plan."

Bruegger's Bagel Bakery gets 20 more seats

By Don Staruk

Bruegger's Bagel Bakery will add 20 more seats to its Main Street restaurant following approval by the Planning Board Tuesday night of a modification to its special permit permit. The approval for a reduction in parking requirements will allow the restaurant to increase the number of seats for customers from 32 to 52.

Bruegger's had requested approval for up to 72 seats, but Planning Board members went with the recommendation of town planning staff in limiting the restaurant to just 20 additional seats.

Town bylaws require new businesses to provide a certain number of parking spaces for its employees and customers, depending on the type of business. Bruegger's already had a parking deficit, according to Stephen Colyer, planning director, but applied for an increase in the number of spaces it would be allowed based on the fact that Ford's Coffee Shop closed, freeing up its seating capacity. The new Coffee Connection, which opened in the former Ford's space, is using only 22 of Ford's 72 seats, freeing up 40 seats.

The special permit required four of five board members to approve it, and only four were at the meeting. Board member Paul Salafia was absent.

The board "reluctantly" approved the special permit, according to Mr. Colyer, after Hooks Johnston, chairman, told John Stillanos, Bruegger's owner, that he was not happy with Bruegger's attitude toward the board during the special permit application process.

"I was surprised. I was surprised that they gave it to them," Mr. Colyer said.

Bruegger's initial application last year was for 72 seats, but that was reduced to 32 before it was given approval. After that decision, the store posted a sign telling customers that it was the Planning Board's fault the store didn't have more seats.

Mr. Johnston said Tuesday night that the only reason he was not voting against the special permit application was something the store's former attorney, Reginald Marden, had said at the beginning of the restaurant's special permit application process. Mr. Marden, who died earlier this month after the plane he was flying crashed into Nantucket Sound, had made a comment on the board's philosophical approach, according to Mr. Colyer, and that the board should not slap new businesses and instead should grant some consideration to businesses trying to move in and grow in town.

In other business Tuesday night, the Planning Board also:

- Closed the public hearing on Marland Place, the proposal that would turn the former Marland Mills buildings off Stevens Street, on the west side of the Shawsheen River, into offices and housing for elderly people. A vote should come up on that at the board's next meeting, July 12;

- Closed the public hearing on West Hollow subdivision, located off Spring Grove Road. A site visit was scheduled for next week;

- Rejected a definitive subdivision plan for Quiet Lane, located at Argilla Road;

- Closed the public hearing on Preston Circle, a subdivision located at 406 Lowell St.;

- Approved Paddock Estates.

- Gave final review to the special permits for the school building construction plans. The plans should now be ready to be signed, according to Mr. Colyer.

SMOKING BYLAW: The Health Department said Wednesday that the town's no-smoking bylaw goes into effect July 13.

THE BODY'S INFORMATION HIGHWAY

Not only does the spinal column serve as a primary means of structural support for the body, but it houses the spinal cord. Thirty-one pairs of spinal nerves course down the spine from the brain, exit through a series of openings in the vertebrae, and branch out in a complicated network to reach virtually every tissue in the body. It is through the nervous system that the brain exerts its commanding influence and receives sensory information. If abnormal movement in a joint of the spine were to pinch or irritate a nerve root, the consequences of this abnormality could be felt virtually anywhere in the body. That is why the chiropractor's efforts to restore normal function to spinal joints carries potential benefit for the entire body.

If you have been suffering with symptoms and have been unable to find relief or would like another opinion, we can help. We offer you compassionate and thorough care for a variety of problems. Please call DeLorenzo Chiropractic Group, 475-5042, for an appointment. Our personal concern is your health. Our office is located at 15 Central St. Have a happy and safe July 4th!

P.S. The nervous system should be considered to be a virtual extension of the brain.

A DETERRENT TO ORAL CANCER

There is now evidence that beta carotene can reverse pre-cancerous sores in the mouth, which suggests that the vitamin may play a big part in preventing oral cancer. The preliminary results of a study presented at the American Cancer Society Science Writers Seminar showed that 53 percent of people with pre-cancerous lesions responded to treatment with 60mg. of beta carotene daily for six months. The response was defined as a 50 percent or more reduction in the number of lesions. Beta carotene, which is found in green leafy vegetables and carrots, is an antioxidant. It protects tissues from oxidative damage, which is the cellular equivalent of rusting. This is important news considering 40,000 new cases of oral cancer are diagnosed each year.

You will find that our office is a unique, advanced facility designed to provide patients with the most comfortable, up-to-date, convenient dental care possible. We provide all the dental services you and your family require, such as preventive care, nutrition counseling, restorations, cosmetic dentistry, crowns & bridges, etc. We'll keep an eye on your complete oral health when you join our ever-growing list of smiling patients. At 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133 (with easy access off Rt 93), hours are Mon & Thur 10-8, Tues & Fri 8-6, & by appointment (475-2431).

P.S. The first signs of oral cancer are white patches inside the mouth which cannot be scraped off.

"Lock in a mortgage rate while you shop."

The typical house-hunt goes like this:

You find the house of your dreams. Sign the deal. Then you secure a mortgage—hoping that rates don't edge up and that you qualify for a big enough loan.

At Cambridge Savings Bank, our "Rate Lock While You Shop" is a better way to house-hunt.

Lock in a rate.

Before you shop for a house, talk to us and we'll lock in your rate for 30 days. If rates go up, you're protected. If rates go down, you get the lower rate. Once you submit your application, your rate is then locked in through closing.

Alan D. Solomont

Local healthcare executive Alan D. Solomont recently was awarded an honorary doctorate of humane letters degree by the University of Massachusetts Lowell.

Mr. Solomont is founder and chief executive officer of The A-D-S Group, which is headquartered in Andover. The company manages more than 35 sub-acute, nursing care and assisted living facilities and specializes in developing and implementing creative solutions to post-acute, long-term care and senior-living needs.

Mr. Solomon, who has served on the boards of the University of Lowell and the University of Massachusetts, was also chosen to deliver the 1994 commencement address.

Commenting on the choice of Mr. Solomont as an honorary degree recipient, Lowell Chancellor William T. Hogan noted his "continuing dedicated service to the university, the UMass system and the larger community."

"His ongoing commitment to 'doing the right thing' makes him a fitting role model for our students and a colleague worthy of our most profound respect and admiration," Mr. Hogan said.

A former nursing home administrator and community organizer for tenant and neighborhood organizations in Lowell, Mr. Solomont has served on the boards of the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes, Jewish Fund for Justice and the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston. He is a member of the President's Council for Families U.S.A., a trustee of the University Hospital at Boston University Medical Center and was an overseer of Lawrence General Hospital. He is currently treasurer of the Massachusetts Democratic Party and is a managing trustee of the Democratic National Committee.

Named New England Healthcare Entrepreneur of the Year in 1993 by Inc. magazine, he holds a bachelor's degrees in nursing from the University of Lowell and political science and urban studies from Tufts University.

In his commencement address, Mr. Solomont reinforced his long involvement with the university and the community and singled out individuals who make a difference in the work they do and the lives they lead. He challenged degree recipients to make their own difference. "From the most famous to the obscure, from the most gifted to the most ordinary, none of us is incapable of lending a helping hand, or being a good citizen, or leaving the world a better place," he said.

Andover teachers

Several Andover teachers will be among 14,000 people who will gather July 1-6 in New Orleans at the National Education Association's 132nd annual meeting.

Attending from Andover are Sondra Finegold of West Elementary School, Michael Lynch from Andover High School; and Kerry Costello and Bob Lague. Mr. Lague will be the organist for the convention.

The theme of the 1994 annual meeting will be "Public Education is a Public Trust."

FINANCIAL STRATEGIES

by Ronald R. Hill, CLU, ChFC

BEYOND IRA'S AND KEOGH'S

For most working people, retirement plans such as Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA's) and 401(K)'s make good sense, as far as they go. Their problem rests with the fact that investors are restricted in the amounts which they can invest in these retirement vehicles. Those who seek to defer taxes on larger blocks of funds should consider the variable annuity. This type of investment is essentially a tax-deferred retirement plan sold by insurance companies. On the one hand, it provides a death benefit that guarantees heirs will collect the amount invested in the contract or the cash value of the account. On the other, it serves as a tax-deferred investment vehicle with no caps on the amount that can be invested in it each year. Investors can usually choose among a number of investment options, and can diversify the portfolio well. Some products have more and/or better investment options than others; we can help you make a choice of product which will suit your needs.

Please give me a call today to discuss your financial objectives and how proper money management can help you achieve them. I am a Chartered Financial Consultant. BAYSTATE FINANCIAL SERVICES is located at 10 Essex Street, here in Andover at 475-9212. For your convenience, I also have an office at 100 N. Washington St. in Boston (617-523-4500).

NOTE: Variable annuities are among the very fastest growing investment categories in the marketplace today. This is so for good reasons; with their range of investment options and tax-deferred build-up, they are a great choice for the right investor.

rated with animal stickers, and its carefully collected contents of $62 to the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter in Methuen. The contribution is the result of their seven-month campaign.

Christy, the daughter of Denise and Joseph Fiorentino, of 24 Hidden Way, says the project got started last year when Christy received a notice from the MSPCA asking for help for creatures without good homes.

In November, the youngster enlisted the help of her friend and classmate, Colleen Griffin, the daughter of Gerard and Patricia Griffin, of Hawk Road.

The girls placed one of their two collection boxes at South School, in a cubby in Mary Popovich's third-grade classroom, for their friends' contributions. The other remained at Christy's home for visitors' donations. They designed posters and put up notices around school to call attention to their cause.

"My family really liked the idea I was helping animals," says Colleen.

"The thing I liked about it the most is Christy had been saving money for a treasured plate with a black lab. When she got the notice from the MSPCA, she put her money into the MSPCA" (collection), says Denise Fiorentino, Christy's mother.

"It was really good of them to go out of themselves and do something for someone else. I was very proud that they saw it to completion," adds Patricia Griffin, Colleen's mother.

"We got two kittens from the MSPCA in November. That really sparked an interest in her."

"It was really wonderful when they came by. There is so much children can do. We have nice friends of the shelter out there," says Ingrid Harding, project coordinator at the MSPCA animal center.

South hosts Career Day

By Ronnie Ginsburg Ventura

Fifth-graders at South School had the opportunity to learn about a variety of careers Monday, June 13, at the school's first annual Career Day. In April, students were asked to fill out an Interest Inventory Questionnaire. They could prioritize 30 different careers they were interested in learning about, then the expertise of 18 professionals and parents was tapped based on the results.

Students were able to attend career talks by four of their top six choices. Each speaker met with groups of 10 to 12 students for 30 minutes.

Participants included Sgt. Barbara Connolly, an Andover police officer;

Amanda Farkas, a Wilmington figure-skater; George Gardner, a geologic engineer; Marcia Huston, an Andover body-builder and personal-fitness trainer; Wendy Reynolds, Andover interior designer; David Sullivan, Andover artist; Karen Graichen-Linnane, a chemist at Genetics Institute; John Dugger, Andover architect; Martha Lindsay, a veterinarian at Andover Animal Hospital; Melissa Duxbury, a biologist at Genetics Institute; Tom Urbels, attorney for the town of Andover; Stephen Eng, an electrical engineer for Bell Labs in Haverhill; Dalia Diaz, a TV producer for Channel 46 in Lawrence; Bob Staton, a sign-language interpreter and head of curriculum of the interpreter-training program, Northern Essex Community College; Christina Kalman, owner of Christina's in Andover; Robert Nelken, a pediatrician with Andover Pediatrics; and Lisa Adelsberger, Andover Townsman photographer.

The purpose of the day was twofold. First, students had the opportunity to learn specific information about different possible career interests. Speakers talked about how they became interested in their line of work, what experiences prepared them for what they do now, what they enjoy most and find most frustrating about their jobs, and what a typical day is like.

Secondly, students became more generally aware of the world of work. The next time a student who heard the architect speak looks at a building, he or she will think more about how the building was designed and how cost-effectiveness, zoning issues and construction timetables, as well as artistic considerations, figured into that design.

The next time a student who heard the photographer speak opens a newspaper and sees a picture, he or she will think about how many pictures had to be taken for that particular one to be created. They will remember what it took for each shot to be set up.

Students also shared what they learned from their speakers with other fifth-graders, so that each student had the opportunity to learn about all 30 of the careers represented.

What's on tap for Andover's July 4th celebration

By Jane Gifun

There will be pancakes on the griddle when Andover's 13th annual Fourth of July celebration begins Monday morning in The Park. With the 8 a.m. breakfast comes Dixieland jazz and entertainment, featuring organ-grinder hurdy gurdy Monkey and Me, and Cyrus the talking juggler. Balloon-makers, clowns and stilt-walkers will also entertain.

Judging for the 13th annual Horribles Parade will take place at 9 a.m. on Bartlet Street. The parade will step off promptly at 9:30 for a casual march up Punchard Avenue to Main Street to Park Street to Whittier Street, and back into the park via the balloon arch.

Horribles parades have been part of Andover's tradition since the turn of the century. Early parades were satirical as well as patriotic. The modern version is a participants' parade, with children of all ages invited to dress themselves, their pets, doll carriages or bicycles in a fun way. Some neighborhoods come to the parade year after year, having developed a theme that allows full participation of the neighborhood. Last year

Schedule of events

All-town breakfast: 8-11 a.m., $2.50.

Entertainment: 8-11 a.m.

Horribles Parade: Forms on Bartlet Street by 9 a.m.; judging at 9 a.m.; steps off promptly at 9:30. Strolling minstrel will entertain between 9:30-10:30.

Parade route: Bartlet Street to Punchard Avenue to Main Street to Park Street to Whittier Street and into The Park.

Games for kids: 9:45-11:30 a.m. in The Park.

Middlesex Concert Band: 10 a.m.-noon in The Park near the bandstand (bring a blanket or chair).

saw many dinosaurs. Have they become extinct – or have they endured? Come and find out.

Each parade participant received an original button as a remembrance. Some marchers will be collecting No. 13. All new awards will be given this year. Parade marshal Joe Frio invites everyone to participate. This parade is a joy to watch; Andover is blessed with some wonderful imaginations.

After the parade ends, and until noon, the town will again be treated to the Middlesex Concert Band. Music will feature traditional and patriotic pieces under the direction of Robson Shelley. The morning is organized by the all-volunteer Committee for Patriotic Observances, which was formed 13 years ago to provide the town with non-commercial family fun for Independence Day. The town of Andover provides partial funding and lots of help. Come join the fun and feel the spirit that makes this one of the best days to be an "Andoverite."

The morning of fun and games also marks one of the last opportunities to make a donation to help defray the cost of another great Andover tradition, the evening fireworks. Selectman Jerry Silverman reports that the fireworks fund is $4,000 short this year. A $1 donation to the fireworks fund gives people the chance to win a set of buttons or a T-shirt.

The Townsman has an early deadline for next week's issue: Friday, July 1, noon.

PAY ATTENTION TO CONTRACT DEADLINES

Both buyer and seller should be aware of all of the deadlines in their purchase agreement. Each contract is different, but typically there are time limits covering the structural contingency, financing application, financing commitment, and settlement.

If you are careless as a buyer you could lose your right to ask a seller to pay for needed repairs. There may be a limit on the time the seller has to respond to the buyer's request to complete repairs not otherwise required by the contract. Failure to apply for your mortgage on time may place your deposit at risk if the loan is later denied. In many cases, the agreement can be declared null and void by the seller if financing is not approved within the time frame set for the in the contract, especially if there is a backup contract. A delayed closing can cost the sellers money, and they may ask the buyer to reimburse these expenses.

If there's a move in your future, the real estate specialists at Century 21 Carriage House are ready to serve you. Feel free to visit our office at 10 High Street, or phone us at 478-1243.

On Wednesday, July 27, author Eleanor Richardson and volunteer Christine Gebhard will describe the "ins-and-outs" of the Society's publication for the town's 350th anniversary, Andover: A Century of Change - 1896-1996.

Lemonade and cookies will be provided at all noontime programs. Everyone is welcome to bring a lunch. A small donation is requested.

SUMMONING THE NECESSARY COURAGE

One of the elements most admired by those who value character is courage. Many might see this quality in the form of a knight slaying a dragon. Physical courage, however, may be easier to summon than the courage that needs to be called upon to slay the dragons of dissenting thought. In the words of Charles Caleb Colton: "Physical courage which dispels all danger, will make a man brave in one way; and moral courage, which dispels all opinion, will make a man brave in another. The former would seem most necessary for the camp; the latter for the council; but to constitute a great man both are necessary."

When someone close to you is sick or has passed away, courage is often hard to come by. But when you focus on simple behaviors, you can begin to feel more in control and thus, discover more courage. You need something to count on right now - a way to "count" the hours of each day so you will get through them. For guidance, call BURKE FUNERAL HOME. ## KIDS CLUB CELEBRATES SUMMERTIME

These Shawsheen Kids Club members have been working on their go-karts since last September. Stopping for the winter, they resumed work this spring, under the direction of instructor Jamie Carew (center, in background). At left, No. 49 Drummer Boy is piloted by Scott Chamberlain and Jonathan Chang. John Jeffery and Evan Dunn (not shown) also worked on the go-kart. In the middle, Herbie the Love Gun is driven by Evan Greer (seated), with Laura Graig-Comin and Bennet Leon behind him. The Moo-bile painted with a cow motif was built by Eric Nothnagel (back) and Brian Curtis (steering). Allison Caffrey and Mike Rikeman (not shown) also helped it "mooove."

◀ Eric Nothnagel and Brian Curtis show off the back of their Moo-bile. The Kids Club program at Shawsheen School met after school between 3 and 6 p.m. The students who go there say it is as comfortable as home, except they get to work on a variety of arts-and-crafts or club projects.

Bus driver Bill Lancaster donned a tuxedo and turned his school bus into "Bill's Limo" for the last day of school last week. At each stop, he provided VIP treatment, literally rolling out the red carpet for the students. He told Carol Znamierowski, transportation coordinator for the public schools, that he "really enjoys each and every one of these kids," and considers them the future leaders of Andover. Bringing home the students from South School, he is shown on Gardner Avenue with Russell and Geoffrey Stevens.

Vandalism

ishment by spreading status symbols.

Either the symbols are ignorant attempts at fashioning peace signs or they are the ultimate tongue-in-cheek jabs at the establishment. Either way the town and its residents will have to pay.

Vandalism will cost the town government $40,396.85 this fiscal year. And that figure, a total of most vandalism to public buildings, does not include the 139 instances of vandalism to residents' property reported to the police as of the end of May. Nor does it include the instances of vandalism that are never reported to the police.

Projected for a full year, there will be 336 reported cases in calendar year 1994, up from 304 last year, and 282 in 1992.

But this does not necessarily reflect an increasing pattern as both police officers and maintenance department workers describe the degree of vandalism as periodically rising and falling, and its targets often changing from year to year. There were 368 cases of vandalism reported in 1989, for instance.

"It goes in cycles. It almost depends on what's the thing to do that year, to turn the basketball nets around or destroy them," said Jim Brightney, head of municipal maintenance for the town, referring to vandalism directed at Recreation Park basketball hoops. The goals were twisted around in different directions, one basket facing directly into the woods, and others turned at angles to the courts.

"Percentage-wise if you were to take (vandalism) as a percentage of our budget, it's probably pretty small. But at the same time it's considerable. The town has to eat this repeatedly," said Mr. Brightney. "It's an unbudgeted-for item that we have. This is not the cost to remedy the situation, that's the cost to clean it up."

Park gazebo hit again

Perhaps no one structure in town has been so often vandalized as The Park's gazebo, which was defaced again last Friday, the first day of the downtown business-sponsored Bazaar Days. Benches around the bandstand were broken or marred and the gazebo itself was covered with drawings and references to Satan, acid and "dohnut" eating police officers.

Ken Parker, town buildings superintendent, said the gazebo is painted about three or four times every year and was last painted in late May.

"I could probably paint it 10 times, but I don't. I can paint it Friday, and Friday night they'll tear it up" he said. "I let it go until two or three days before Memorial Day, just hoping they wouldn't do anything."

In June of 1992 a solution to the ongoing gazebo problem was suggested by the police and that suggestion has been the topic of renewed conversation at the station house recently, said Lt. Richard Enos.

Under the proposal there would be increased lighting in the area and the gazebo would become off-limits during certain times of the night, such as after 7 in the winter and after 9 in the summer. A no-trespassing bylaw would be passed and patrols in the area would be stepped up to enforce it.

"I think as a police department the rank and file want to do something," said Patrolman Robert Cronin, who looked over the damage Friday morning. "It's a big draw on the budget to be replacing the stuff and repainting the stuff."

Andover public schools

The biggest draw on taxpayer money from vandalism is attacks in and on the school buildings. Approximately $36,119.40 of the more than $40,000 in vandalism is used to fix or replace vandalized school property.

If anything, these numbers are conservative figures because work orders are only filed under vandalism if they are obvious reason for the problem, said municipal maintenance workers. Nine recent work orders do not have any attributable dollar figures yet, and vandalism reported in the last weeks of school has not yet been filed.

This is the first year the municipal maintenance department has specifically tracked vandalism this way, and the Townsmen went over the list with workers to eliminate a handful of work orders that may have been double-billed.

There was $15,343.12 in vandalism to Andover High School itself and $2,324.46 more in damage to the adjacent Collins Center facility.

Tim Thomas, High School principal, expressed surprise and concern at the level of vandalism and asked to see a list of the costs.

Currently there is a Saturday school work program during which students who have vandalized will clean the buildings and grounds or stay in and do homework for five hours.

"If the vandalism is serious enough we involve the police and there is restitution," Mr. Thomas said.

Mark McQuillan, schools superintendent, named the addition of Bill Fahey, youth services coordinator, the Youth Council, and the Suicide Task Force as pro-active efforts that can help eliminate some ill-will.

"We haven't really had an anti-violence campaign, but perhaps it's time for that," he said.

Both school administrators said they are aware of specific instances of vandalism, but they believe vandalism to the outside of school buildings is declining.

Mr. Parker agrees with them. Eight to 10 years ago the damage to windows alone totaled $18,000-$20,000. However, he said vandalism to the inside of the buildings — broken toilet partitions, door closers and ventilation grills — is on the rise.

Kicked and pushed in grills have been a particular problem at West Middle School, where tough, institutional-style grills have been installed.

"We went from a regular type of grill, stuff that you'd have in an office or a school, and we had to put heavy duty still ones in," said Mr. Brightney. Approximately $5,057 was spent on vandalism at West Middle, while $2,788.64 was spent at Doherty Middle School. There were two instances of vandalism at West Middle reported to the police this week, one Friday, one Monday.

It's not just the kids

While school vandalism accounts for the bulk of attributable damage, Mr. Fahey, youth services coordinator, is quick to point out that teenagers are not responsible for all vandalism.

"Look at Recreation Park. There's trash everywhere, there's spray paint. It's a beautiful area" used by many groups, he said. "It's not just the kids. That's a lot of B.S. I think they get a bad rap for that."

"In terms of vandalism, I think the community should look at if there is a message there. I think we should look at it and try to figure out what the message is."

"It's basically a part of entitlement. I don't think it's a sign of angst. There's a sense of 'Why not me?' " said Larry-Larsen, selectman and child psychologist. "I don't think it's because they are suffering from some deep inner rage at the system."

Both Mr. Fahey and Dr. Larsen believe the anger of frustration that leads to vandalism is different from the feelings that have led to the town's three teen-age suicides this fiscal year.

"Most times, it's senseless, absolutely senseless," said Lt. Enos. "The nature of the crime is that way."

"The words I hear are 'bored,' 'everybody's does it,' and sometimes it's alcohol-induced," said officer Cronin.

Solutions

Dr. Larsen said the necessary laws and fines are already on the books and simply need to be enforced.

"I think the penalty for the law that is there is severe enough," agreed Lt. Enos. "Whether it is meted out by the court enough is a question of some of us here."

Dr. Larsen suggested vandals have to be shown the problems they have caused and should often fix the damage themselves.

"There's nothing like sweat remedy," he said. "Those (park) benches are expensive. They take work. Let them see the turmoil. Let them see that this is costly. It's a sign of privileged, entitled, narcissistic behavior."

Mr. Fahey said the town needs to create more pro-active rather than reactive programs and involve youth in activities and decisions.

"If young people are involved they're not going to be spending a lot of time damaging other people's property," he said. "I think they can be involved in developing solutions. Who has sat down and talked to the young people about this problem?"

Mr. Fahey said he intends to have youth involved in every step of the process of creating the proposed activity center in Recreation Park, from planning the building layout, to carrying wood.

"People laugh at me around here but I think they can do it. If we trust them, they can do it," he said.

Betsy Williams doesn't garden by color

"Plant lore says that this is the rose that surrounded Sleeping Beauty's castle," said Ms. Williams.

Ms. Williams is, in a sense, a professional gardener. By her own account, she writes two articles a year for gardening magazines, teaches on a regular basis, helps run a gardening newsletter, spends eight to 10 days a month lecturing "all over the country," and was on the board of directors of the International Herb Growers and Marketers Association for six years.

Though that's enough to keep anyone busy, Ms. Williams said, "I spend every possible minute I can, at least one day a week," tending to the garden and searching for unique plant life.

"A lot of the plant materials I choose or track down—it's because of the plant lore or legends," she said.

But Ms. Williams does not garden simply as an exercise in historical horticulture. In fact, she said virtually everything in her garden is used in her 68 Park St. shop, Betsy Williams The Proper Season. Ms. Williams said about 60 percent of her income comes from The Proper Season sales, and the rest comes from weddings, lectures and classes.

Her small shop is crammed with a large number of dried flowers, wall decorations and baskets, and has books on flower folk lore, a personal interest. But The Proper Season is not a typical small-town store.

Until a few years ago, Ms. Williams had a mail-order catalog, and she sent her newsletter to nearly 20,000 people. Because of the economic downturn, she dropped the catalog two years ago, cut newsletter subscriptions, and began charging $2 a year with the spring/summer edition.

Ms. Williams believes her traveling is one of the main reasons for her nation-wide customer base.

"The business has gotten a lot of publicity over the years, so we have customers all over the country," she said. "Even though it's a very little shop and it's hidden away, it's much more than a local shop."

The garden at her Chestnut Street house is something different, as well.

Once part of Phillips Academy, her land and house, adjacent to the school's bird sanctuary, housed the caretaker of the grounds. However, by the time Ms. Williams moved in, in 1967, the house and land had fallen into some disrepair. Yet, the land called to Ms. Williams, and she took an interest in gardening.

"I think it all started when we moved here. I think it's probably the property more than anything else," she said.

She also wanted her children to have a clearer understanding of the plant life they were reading about in books such as Peter Rabbit.

"I got interested in growing herbs more than anything else because of my children. I just thought it would be of interest to them and help in their intellectual development. I'm not sure it ever did, but it certainly helped in mine," she said.

While her knowledge has expanded, her garden, the surrounding area, and the attitudes of some gardeners has changed, as well. The sheep that used to graze in the lot next door to her, for instance, have been replaced by an in-ground pool.

"People love gardening today. They absolutely love gardening. But they want an instant garden and this is not an instant garden. It's in a constant state of evolution always," said Ms. Williams.

Throughout her property plants grow together, and plump blackberries mingle with rose petals.

Ms. Williams said she does not plant flowers according to their color in an effort at controlled beauty.

"That is one way of gardening, but to me that's overwhelming. I don't look for color. The color comes afterward. As far as I'm concerned it all comes together beautifully," she said. "All along this property I make a conscious effort for plants to seed themselves. I figure the plant knows better than I where it will be happy."

"I don't do theme gardens or anything. These gardens are for our use. But I'd love to do a children's storybook garden some day because it would be so much fun," she said.

She seems well on her way, as her garden is filled with valerian, Our Lady's mantle, and yarrow.

Valerian, the plant from which the drug Valium is made, strongly attracts rats, and it is believed that the famous Pied Piper, his musical talents aside, smeared this on the bottom of his cloak to lead the rats out of the city.

Our Lady's mantle was believed to keep one's skin looking young.

"The people in the Middle Ages thought that the pleated leaf resembled the cloak of the Virgin Mary," said Ms. Williams, and so they would fill the leaf with water and wash themselves with it.

Some green thumb tips

By Neil Fater

A person who makes his or her living growing gardens does not want to give away all of her secrets. However, Betsy Williams did mention a few tips that may help the common or beginning gardener.

One way to take advantage of seemingly undesirable space and to keep unwanted animals away from a patch is to create fenced in, raised beds, she said.

In her own garden, Ms. Williams built raised beds in an area made of solid clay and filled the beds with compost and fertile topsoil.

She said a gardener can put in raised beds and small wire fences around valuable vegetation. However, despite Ms. Williams' complaints of woodchucks, and her knowledge of how to keep them at bay, there is a noticeable lack of fencing in her garden.

"The reality is we don't really do it, we just swear at the woodchucks," said Ms. Williams. "I mean, there's gardening theory and there's gardening reality."

Ms. Williams also highly recommends that those interested in either gardening or cooking grow their own herbs.

Gardening magazines often describe herbs as a nice match for beginning growers, since they require minimal care. People can grow many herbs in pots on window sills.

"If you love food, you absolutely have to have access to fresh herbs," said Ms. Williams, who explained that most herbs have not changed in appearance for thousands of years.

Ms. Williams said she gave her 4½-year-old grandson, Joshua, a thyme plant when he was 2½ years old, and that he still checks to see how it is coming along.

"Whenever he comes, he runs over to see how his thyme plant is doing," she said.

ing the Battle of Troy, the warrior Achilles' men were not healing and he appealed to the gods for help. Athena gave him a plant, yarrow, with which his soldiers could pack their wounds.

"Yarrow, to this day, the leaf of that plant, will stop the flow of blood and encourage clean healing," said Ms. Williams.

Ms. Williams also has Egyptian onions, a lack of which may have caused the first recorded labor strike.

"This is the onion that was used by the Egyptians to feed the Israelites as they built the pyramids," she said, displaying the vegetable, and barely scratching the surface of the plants her garden houses. She moved on to the next row of vegetation and gently held a purple-flowered plant.

"This," she said, "is foxglove, considered a plant of the fairies."

Woodchucks . . .

animal they caught Sunday, the residents called a private contractor to catch and dispose of the animals. By Tuesday afternoon four woodchucks had been trapped and euthanized.

Peter Maher, son of Tom and Nancy Maher, of 94 Elm St., was scratched on the leg Wednesday, June 22, by a baby woodchuck. The scratch did not break the skin, but Ms. Maher called her pediatrician, Dr. Karen Barnett at Pentucket Medical Center in North Andover, who expressed concern that the woodchuck could have been rabid.

"She wanted me to come in to document it," Ms. Maher said.

There are a number of woodchucks in the area, and there was no way to tell which one might have scratched Peter, or if it had rabies. But Ms. Maher, who said she was told by Dr. Barnett that woodchucks are a great threat for carrying rabies, wanted all the woodchucks removed from her yard and her neighbors' yards.

"Potentially, they can become rabid at any point," Ms. Maher said. "It's a death threat. It's a threat to my family."

Woodchuck city

The Mahers live at 94 Elm St. A neighbor, John Zieline, at 96 Elm St., said the woodchucks first made a home "a couple years ago" under a shed in the Mahers' backyard. Then, as the animals multiplied, a pair moved in and burrowed a home under a canoe in his own backyard.

"So they have a little awning," Mr. Zieline said.

This year, a pair moved into Stuart and Bonnie Krentcils' home, at 98 Elm St., and nested in a crawl space under the house.

"The ones that are living under our house have had babies, so we have woodchuck city," Ms. Krentcil said last Friday. "We've counted, living under our house, at least six. They really are very cute and benign to us."

But that was before she learned woodchucks could carry rabies, Ms. Krentcil said. The Krentcils had planned to put mothballs and ammonia in the crawl space to drive the woodchucks out once the babies were grown. The animals are now big enough to do that and, knowing there is a threat of rabies, Ms. Krentcil said they will do it sooner rather than later.

Mr. Zieline said the woodchucks under his canoe have also had babies, at least three and possibly as many as six.

Four-year-old Peter Maher apparently chased a cat into Mr. Zieline's yard on Wednesday, June 22. The cat ran off into the woods, but Peter had wandered close to the woodchucks' burrow. Ms. Maher said that, from what Peter told her, he and one of the baby woodchucks had a staring match, then the woodchuck scratched the boy's leg and Peter came running home.

If it had broken the skin, or if it had this week. A scratch on the hand is dangerous because rabies is spread by saliva and children tend to put their hands into their mouth, she said. Dr. Barnett said Ms. Maher did the right thing washing Peter's leg with soap and water for at least 10 minutes. That will at least reduce the chance of contracting rabies if it was present on the skin.

Ms. Maher said the problem in her neighborhood is that the woodchucks are not afraid of people, so they don't run off.

"The baby woodchucks have grown up with my kids so they're very comfortable with my kids' voices," Ms. Maher said.

Mr. Zieline said that, other than the incident with Peter, the woodchucks are not a problem. But at the rate they are increasing they could be, he said. He is already afraid to leave his cellar door open for fear they will move into his house.

"It's kind of like one of those Amway pyramids," he said. Gone unchecked, the woodchuck population could threaten the Central Business District, he joked. But he said he doesn't blame anyone for taking the problem seriously.

"If I had younger kids, I'd be a little bit more bonkers about it," Mr. Zieline said.

Dissatisfied with response

Ms. Maher said she first called Wayne Nader, the town's animal control officer, who came to her house and observed the animals, but said there was nothing he could do for her.

"I have had no luck with him," Ms. Maher said.

Dr. Barnett said she asked Officer Nader to capture at least the family of woodchucks in Mr. Zieline's backyard, so that they might be tested for rabies, but that Officer Nader refused.

Officer Nader said Monday that he did get into an argument with Dr. Barnett because she wanted him to trap all the woodchucks.

"I don't do nuisance wildlife trapping. I just don't have the time. There's only one of me," Officer Nader said. "I don't make a habit of trapping healthy animals just to kill them."

Officer Nader said it takes 48 hours to get test results back from the state lab, and it would take three to five weeks to trap and test all the woodchucks in the Mahers' neighborhood, and he still wouldn't know if he got the right one. And if rabies shots were going to be administered, they'd have to start a lot sooner than that, he said.

Dr. Barnett said that even though a test on the woodchucks in Mr. Zieline's backyard would not be definitive, and would not affect the decision on whether to give Peter rabies shots, it would reduce the potential for a problem.

Everett Penney, town health director, said he talked with Officer Nader on Thursday, June 23, about the woodchuck problem at the Mahers' house, and that Ms. Maher requested Officer Nader to trap all the woodchucks in the area because of the potential that the child might have been exposed to rabies.

This was the first woodchuck the Mahers caught in a trap.

"We don't trap animals on private property," Mr. Penney said.

If the animal that scratched the child could be singled out, then that animal would be killed and its head would be cut off and sent for rabies testing, Mr. Penney said. But he also said that, even if all the woodchucks were trapped, killed and tested, there would be no way to identify the one that scratched the child.

Mr. Penney did not downplay the danger.

"There is a potential for rabies exposure with a scratch. There is no question," Mr. Penney said.

Rabies can be transmitted through saliva and, because animals clean themselves by licking their fur, even touching the fur creates a potential for transmitting the disease. But Mr. Penney said that, although rabies can show up in a variety of animal groups, across the state and throughout New England the rabies threat has really been with raccoons.

"The solution to the problem is not to trap every woodchuck," Mr. Penney said. The solution is to get the shots, he said.

There is also an answer for how to get rid of the woodchucks.

"The answer to that is call a private exterminator and have the woodchucks removed," Mr. Penney said.

If the woodchucks were on town land, and there was an indication of a rabies problem, then the town would have to deal with it, Mr. Penney said.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski said last week that he had not talked with either Mr. Penney or Officer Nader, but that similar situations have come up in the past. There was a problem with foxes living in a residential neighborhood last year and some residents wanted the town to get rid of the foxes. But Officer Nader observed the foxes, determined they posed no threat and concluded that residents just have to get used to living with the animals around, Mr. Stapczynski said. He backed that decision.

Nancy Maher and her daughter, Colleen, age 2 next month. Peter, age 4, was not home when the photo was taken.

Are they dangerous?

As for the threat of rabies, Officer Nader agrees there is potential for woodchucks being rabid.

"Woodchucks can contract rabies, but they're a low-risk animal," Officer Nader said. But he wouldn't have treated the scenario at the Mahers' house any differently if the animals involved were raccoons, which are a high-risk animal, he said.

All the statistics he has seen about rabies here and in other states show that woodchucks are low on the list as far as risk of contracting rabies, Officer Nader said.

"We've had seven raccoons and one bat test positive," he said.

According to state Department of Public Health figures, 10 of 293 "rodents/lagomorphs" (which is the classification that includes woodchucks), tested in the entire state last year were positive, and all 10 were woodchucks. That was up from one in 1992. Four of 236 rodents/lagomorphs

Extraordinary volunteers

Question: What do Joan Sweeney and Clare Sack have in common with two 9-year-olds, Christy Fiorentino and Colleen Griffin?

Answer: Their big hearts, their ability to get outside of their own heads and care passionately about others, and the fact that they have all learned one of life's more valuable lessons: Chances are you will get more of a rush from giving than from receiving.

We believe that the two 9-year-olds - who raised $62 to make life better for homeless dogs, cats, horses, sheep, goats and even a foal - will be the kind of volunteers that Ms. Sweeney and Ms. Sack are today.

We had to shorten some of the story on Joan Sweeney, it was so long. But the women who nominated her for the paper's series on extraordinary volunteers are effusive about their friend and role model. She has inspired them.

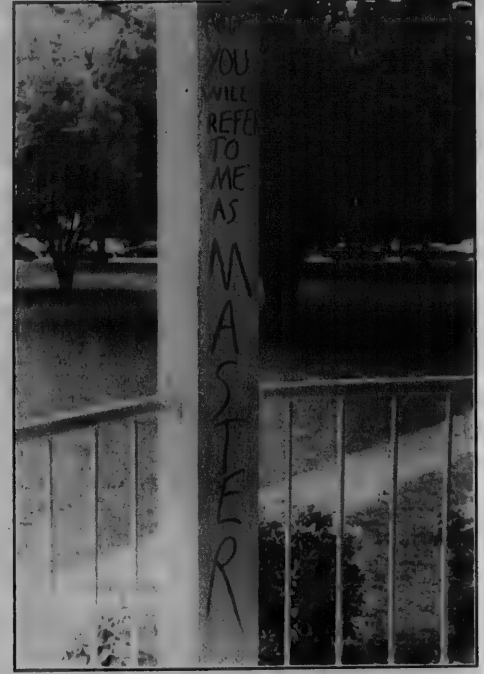

We have worked with Ms. Sweeney and we have seen her energy and the way she cares about others. This community has an extraordinary group of people who give their time to make life better for others. It's never too early to start, either by example for one's children, or by encouraging one's very young children to reach out to others.

Senseless, discouraging vandalism

We were in The Park on Bartlet Street last week when the police and another town employee first saw the vandalism done to benches and the gazebo. They were angry.

Random violence is so useless, so discouraging, so disheartening. We are amazed and sorry at how angry such vandals must be. The town and schools spent thousands of dollars (see the story beginning on page one) during the just-completed school year repairing the results of vandalism in Andover.

The town is cleaning up the mess in The Park in time for the July Fourth activities. We are not sure it should be cleaned up so fast.

Here are two examples of the vandalism inside the gazebo done last week in The Park.

Upside down T-shirt enhances traveling

By Susan Scott Wilner

I am sitting here perusing the New York Times, having stumbled upon a very short but revealing piece about a new innovation, commercial of course. I am becoming quite convinced that Americans thrive on ridicule.

The new invention is called "traveling tees," a T-shirt decked out with several phrases in the foreign language of your choice. These are written upside down so that you can easily refer to them when in a pinch and have forgotten your very bad high school French for "Where's the bathroom?"

If sufficiently obese, the reading is quite enhanced, if too thin, an awkward pull of the shirt will be required to adequately decode your communique, even some midriff may have to be exposed.

Now it does not take too much imagination to envision how this display of Americanism will be greeted in the streets of Paris or anywhere else. Americans struggling to "read" their T-shirts in order to procure the necessities when traveling abroad.

And imagine the problems resulting from the inevitable shrinking of those T-shirts or those unavoidable food stains which might transform "Donde esta puerta?" into "Donde esta muerto?"

The possibilities for humiliation appear limitless. Regardless, the article reports brisk sales. Of course, there is also the chance that the native will just read your T-shirt for you and save you the trouble. However, unsolicited directions to the bathroom at every turn could get annoying.

When I lived in Sweden in the early '70s, my goal was to learn Swedish well enough to disguise my American background. Part of this had to do with the Vietnam War, making Americans very unpopular in Sweden, but also I was embarrassed by the continuing confirmation of the stereotypical American tourist, talking loudly in English (of course) and demanding "American" standards of whatever, wherever they happen to be. Living in a foreign country, I heard the natives' comments, which were none too flattering.

However, this year Americans will be reading loudly instead and this will

Criticizes John O'Brien for tobacco stance

Editor, Townsmen:

If anyone ever wondered how the Massachusetts Senate manages year after year to block health legislation not favored by the tobacco lobbyists on Beacon Hill, one not need look any further than our own Senator O'Brien.

Senator O'Brien recently supported Senators Bulger and Birmingham in voting to reduce the budget of the state's successful tobacco-control program. This program is funded by the 25-cent cigarette tax approved by referendum Question 1 in 1992. The House and the governor supported level funding of the program.

Make no mistake about it, more than enough money is being raised by the cigarette tax to fund the

John O'Brien should support tobacco program

current program, plus the other programs Senator Birmingham has diverted money to.

At our last Town Meeting, Andover passed one of the most comprehensive tobacco control bylaws in the state. Andover also overwhelmingly supported Question 1. I believe this shows that most voters in town recognize that tobacco use is an extremely serious health problem. Evidently when it comes to tobacco control, Senator O'Brien is more interested in pleasing the Senate leadership on Beacon Hill and the tobacco industry than either representing his own constituents or doing the right thing.

Recent newspaper reports show that tobacco consumption is down 15 percent in Massachusetts. This drop contrasts with figures showing that tobacco use did not decline at all nationwide. The tobacco-control program funded by Question 1 is working. I'm sure that the tobacco industry is doing everything they can to see that such a successful program is dismantled as soon as possible. Remember that they were willing to spend $9 million to defeat Question 1 in the first place.

Their pockets are very deep.

What is even more ironic is that Senator O'Brien is pictured on page 20 in the June 23 edition of the Townsmen with a group of Andover students who went to Boston to encourage their legislators to fully fund the Massachusetts tobacco control program. These children certainly know about the advertising and peer pressures that entice children to begin smoking. We know that the vast majority of smokers began smoking before the age of consent. I wonder if Senator O'Brien told those children he was planning to vote to eliminate some of the tobacco control programs in their communities. Senator O'Brien, if you're not part of the solution, then you must be part of the problem.

Tobacco control cut: Betraying Andover citizens

Editor, Townsmen:

Recently, Massachusetts launched a historic statewide tobacco-control program, funded by the special cigarette tax passed by our citizens in 1992. This program will ultimately save lives - cigarette sales have dropped an unprecedented 17 percent in the past year, a direct result of the educational and media programs funded by this tax.

Now, our politicians are threatening to dismantle this critical public-health program. Last week, Massachusetts state senators, including Andover's Senator John O'Brien, D-Andover, voted to cut this program by almost 20 percent. Such a cut betrays the citizens of Andover, who not only passed the cigarette tax but also voted overwhelmingly at our recent Town Meeting to restrict smoking in restaurants and other public places.

Amazingly, a picture of Senator O'Brien posing with children of the Massachusetts Smoke-Free Class of 2000 was published in the Andover Townsmen last week (June 23 issue, page 20).

These children have made a commitment to remain tobacco-free throughout their lives. Senator O'Brien (and the other 25 senators who voted "no" to health) should honor the commitment of these children and the voters at large and restore the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program to the full $96 million. Only a continued commitment from all our citizens and our politicians will keep our state healthy in the future.

Reporter's error, not author's

Editor, Townsmen:

Your June 23 issue had an article about "Andover's little secrets in a 350th book." I quote, "Henry's son, W. Shirley Barnard, once operated a real estate office in the original building. Richard Lally, current owner of the building, is his son."

I trust that the rest of the book is more accurate than this. Unless I am greatly mistaken, Mr. Lally married Mr. Barnard's daughter and would, therefore, be his son-in-law.

DOWN THE YEARS

100 Years Ago, June 29, 1894

The old Abbott Village school buildings were auctioned off by B. Rogers last Saturday afternoon. The large one brought $36 and was bought by the Henderson Bros. who will use it as a carpenter's shop. The small one was knocked off to Andrew Thompson for $84, and he will convert it into a dwelling.

There is no need of asking where the fire is when the alarm rings now. Just start for the peat bog near Red Springs. Another alarm, the third within a week, was given yesterday forenoon for fire at this place.

The School Committee held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, and the principal business was the appointing of teachers for the next school year.

Fourth of July will not be much different from any other day here, except what the small boy makes it. However,

Lawrence is to have quite a celebration, and that is very easily reached.

50 Years Ago, June 29, 1944

With less than two weeks remaining before the primary election on July 11, the various candidates are increasing their activities here in Andover. Of principal local concern is the Republican nomination for representative, in which J. Everett Collins, incumbent, is vying, opposed by a field of four from Methuen and one from North Andover.

The Andover Branch of the Russian War Relief has sent in an average of eight boxes of clothes a month since Jan. 1 to the Massachusetts Chapter. In Moscow itself, capital and show place of the U.S.S.R., people still are hungry and still inadequately clothed; and in the territories recaptured from the Nazis, conditions are indescribable. Anyone wishing to contribute warm clothing, shoes or blankets may leave them at the Andover Red Cross rooms.

The week-end carnival under the sponsorship of the Servicemen's Fund Association gets under way Friday night at 7:00. Booths, games, rides and refreshments will be available for the pleasure of young and old.

Mark Klick, 16, was honored by his classmates, teachers and administrators Monday as the first graduate of the special education class of the Bancroft school.

Redistricting of some pupils at the Central school to relieve crowded conditions there, was approved by the school committee Tuesday night. There will be 54 transferred under the redistricting plan with 17 being assigned to South and 37 to Bancroft.

Tests have been made of the water in the Shawsheen River to determine the cause of the pollutants which have led to the killing of hundreds of fish. Samples have been taken and are under study by the Department of Natural Resources.

An experimental program was initiated at the South Elementary school library this year. As a summer service, with parent and teacher permission, students could borrow for summer reading up to ten books from the school library. Parents of kindergarten and first grade children were asked to come to the school to take the books home for them.

Fees and fines net Andover over $800,000 each year. The amount of income has increased in recent years as the town sought to continue services, while meeting constraints produced by Proposition 2½. In some cases the fee schedule is designed to make departments self-sufficient.

Woodchucks . . .

tested so far in 1994 have tested positive, and again, all four were woodchucks. The four this year were captured in Millis, Braintree, Littleton and Walpole.

Sixty-one of 296 animals tested for rabies in Essex County in the first six months of 1994 tested positive for rabies: 63 of the 61 were raccoons. None were rodents/lagomorphs. In 1993, 84 of the 584 animals tested in Essex County tested positive. One was a rodent/lagomorph, but it wasn't a woodchuck, according to Mr. Nader.

Those figures can be a bit misleading, according to Officer Nader, because once a town has three positive tests on a particular animal, for instance raccoons, the state won't test any more raccoons unless there has been a risk of exposure. So the figures on raccoons could be low.

Nowhere to go
It is illegal to trap woodchucks, or any other wild animals, and release them anywhere other than another spot on the same property. Since the home lots are all about an eighth of an acre in the Mahers' Elm Street neighborhood, that wouldn't do much good.

It is also illegal to put the carcass of an animal in the trash.

"They'd have to bring it somewhere to have it incinerated," Officer Nader said.

Veterinarians and the MSPCA offer that service, he said.

But even after the neighbors had trapped one, Ms. Maher didn't want to put the animal in the car with her two children to take it to the MSPCA. As it was, she didn't tell the children the woodchucks would be killed, but that they were being moved to a new home in the woods.

Officer Nader said the law allows for animals to be "humanely euthanized." He wouldn't comment on whether he thought drowning or shooting was a humane way of killing the animals. He did say the state's Department of Fisheries and Wildlife has a list of private contractors who will remove nuisance wildlife.

The neighbors said one contractor wanted $500 to get rid of the animals. Ms. Maher hired Brian Rowe, of North Reading, who agreed to reduce his price of $35 per woodchuck to $25 each, since there was such a large group of them. He charges $75 each for raccoons, "because of the danger."

Mr. Rowe is a "problem animal control agent," working as a private contractor for the state. He traps the animals in a "live trap," then euthanizes them and incinerates the carcasses. He euthanizes them either by drowning or shooting them with a small-caliber gun. Either way is considered a humane manner of euthanization, he said.

It is illegal for him to use hypodermic needles or drugs, he said.

Ms. Maher said it wasn't a question of money, but simply one of trying to find the best way to deal with the problem.

"How do you solve the problem?" Ms. Maher asked. "If this can be cause for a health problem, then I think it's something the town should be dealing with."

Ms. Krentcil said the woodchucks under her house seem to be healthy, but she understood from Ms. Maher that Dr. Barnett said the animals can become sick quickly.

Ms. Krentcil said her own children are older and are more interested than afraid of the woodchucks. Mr. Zielin said his two children, 9 and 13, also find the woodchucks interesting.

"This is a fascinating nature survey," Mr. Zielin said.

Ms. Maher said she is keeping her two children, Peter, and his younger sister, Colleen, 2, inside, unless she is with them, until the woodchucks are removed.

"I won't let them out now, since Wednesday, unless I'm with them," Ms. Maher said.

Schools' head tech. position eliminated

By Neil Fater

Tightening its budgetary belt this week, the school department officially eliminated the position of director of technology and media, the top technology position in the Andover schools.

Ken Kwajewski, who has held that position since its creation Aug. 14, 1991, appeared to believe the elimination meant the end of his time in Andover, as he left the school administration building Tuesday morning. His current contract expires tomorrow, Friday, July 1.

However, Mark McQuillan, superintendent of schools, said he is in the process of creating a new position for which he hopes Mr. Kwajewski will apply.

The plan was to have the new position created by July 1, but the department is slightly behind schedule, he said.

The new position will be a part-time teaching and part-time staff-development position dealing with technology.

"At this moment I'm hoping there will be a position for him," said Dr. McQuillan. "There's been a necessary need to do some cutting back.

I'm hopeful that this position will enable him to stay. Our hope is he will apply."

The new position saves the system money but will require Mr. Kwajewski, if he applies and is granted the position, to take a pay cut.

"They're trying a new proposal, a new way to work with him, but not in the same capacity," said Mary Lyman, School Committee member.

Andover approved a $40.5 million school building project earlier this year, approximately $4 million of which is devoted to technology. A new technology committee reporting to the School Committee is also being formed. It will look at ways to utilize the funds.

WHAT'S UP

Student writes about evaluating teachers

By Patrick Sharkey

In my two years at Andover High School and in all of my years in the Andover school system, I have been fortunate enough to learn from some of the most wonderful, intelligent, and caring people I know, people who have discovered a way to effectively teach their material, while still making class enjoyable and interesting to the students.

I think these people represent the majority of teachers in the school system. However, many students at Andover High School have expressed great concern that there are teachers who do not meet the high standards necessary to be an effective teacher. It is for this reason that I think the coming teacher evaluations must be carried out in a thorough manner, with several aspects of good teaching assessed in the evaluation, in order to get a clear picture of the quality of each teacher.

The most important aspect of any teacher is how he/she works in the classroom - whether he/she can communicate ideas clearly and understand the needs of different students.

Several times I have heard students saying that they haven't learned a thing in a certain class. While this could be due to lack of motivation, oftentimes it is the case that teachers simply have not taught the material well. One friend of mine had about 20 pages of work in his notebook, including homework notes, etc., to show for the entire year of a course. It turns out that every Friday in this class, they wouldn't do math at all, but instead would simply tell and listen to stories with the teacher as a break. How can a full year of coursework possibly be taught in this way?

An evaluator has to be able to see situations like this happening, and one way to do this would be to have several visits to the class at various, unannounced times. This would allow the evaluator to gain a picture of what a normal class is like, instead of a class carefully prepared by the teacher to impress the visitor to the class. It would also show the natural interaction between student and teacher, which is essential.

Several other concerns are expressed by students. Many resent the fact that there are certain teachers who teach in an extremely impersonal fashion, seemingly unwilling to make any extra effort to help a student, by doing something like staying after school to give extra help. Others say that there are teachers who are simply unfair or have no basis for their grading. A student of one teacher often talks about how he had a test average of C or C+, and received a B+ on his report card.

One way to learn about the teacher's strategies and policies would be to conduct a brief interview with the teacher, covering things like lesson plans and grading policies, and extracurricular activities in which the teacher has participated. This would not only provide information about the classroom performance of the teacher, but would also reveal his/her value to the school in terms of different activities in which the teacher is involved.

Considering that the main objective of a teacher is to successfully teach the subject material to each individual student, I think that the student alone has the best understanding of how effective the teacher actually is, and therefore must have a part in the evaluation process. The student is the only person who can answer the question of whether he/she has truly learned the material, and how effective the teacher has been.

Perhaps a meeting between the students and the evaluator, separate from the teacher, would give a clearer picture of the quality of the teacher according to the students, and would give them a chance to voice any concerns they might have. What is really important in the coming teacher evaluations is not the method used to evaluate, but the success achieved in obtaining a clear, complete picture of the quality of each individual teacher.

Youth Council plans concert for July 7

The Andover Youth Council will sponsor its second major event, this one on Thursday, July 7. It will be the kick-off for the "Dr. Head's Rhythm & Blues Revival: Summer Concert Tour '94."

The show will be from 8 to 11 p.m. at Old Town Hall on Main Street and will feature Dr. Head.

Later venues will include Poms Pond, The Park, and Andover High School, and various guest performers from the local area and Boston will join the tour as the summer progresses. Refreshments will be served. Cost of admission has not yet been determined but it will be a lot cheaper than Great Woods, said organizers.

Featured will be Andover High School's most talented and most popular senior band in its final performances. There will be listening and dancing to rock 'n' roll music.

Cameras and recording devices will be allowed throughout the tour. There is a limit one device per person.

Fax it to the Townsman: 508-470-2819.

auto tips

by Henry Nassar
Owner

A BLOWN OPPORTUNITY
Car owners can perform an easy test with a Jefferson's Head to see if their car's tires are worn beyond acceptable limits. All they need do is slide the nickel (with Jefferson's head upside down) into the tread grooves. If the tread depth does not reach the top of Jefferson's head, the tire cannot be considered safe for even dry-road conditions. At worst, a badly worn tire is at risk for a blowout. Should the unfortunate circumstance occur, drivers should resist the urge to hit their brakes. Cars with blown-out tires can best be brought under control by firmly steering the car to the side of the road. Rear blowouts are likely to pull the car to the side of the blowout, while front blowouts create a side-to-side, fishtailing reaction. Checking the tire is just one of the ways you can make sure your vehicle is safe. Other things to look for are the fluid levels, lights, hoses, and brakes. The service professionals at MASSAR FORD will be happy to check out your vehicle for you. Our customers come to us for what they have found to be quality service, knowledge, expertise, and concern. We encourage our customers to have their vehicles on a regular preventative maintenance schedule. Our friendly and professional sales staff are also available if you are in the market for a new or used car or truck. Stop by and see us at 1850 Main Street in Lawrence (688-3004). Our service department is open Monday through Friday from 7:00 A.M. to 6:30 P.M. Have a safe and happy Fourth of July! HINT: If at all possible, try to pull cars with flat or blown-out tires off to the right side of the road.

Chief Chef and General Manager Steven Merola in the Solarium.

Ristorante Daniela

This area is fortunate to have a new, high quality Italian restaurant conveniently located in North Reading. Owner Aldo Dilemme opened Ristorante Daniela last January. He is assisted by Chief Chef and General Manager Steven Merola. They are dedicated to presenting the highest quality Italian food from their extensive menu. They draw from their Italian heritage for excellent foods and add their own personal innovations.

The restaurant consists of a beautifully appointed main dining room, a more casual Solarium (reminiscent of a sidewalk cafe) and a lounge. Homemade Italian ice cream (gelato) and Italian pastries are among their favorite desserts and make for a great afternoon treat in the Solarium with a cool beverage, fine cordial, espresso or cappuccino.

In the near future, a function room will be available. It will accommodate approximately one hundred people.

Great care was taken in preparing the menu at Ristorante Daniela. The entire menu is special with high quality meals at moderate prices. Among the most popular offerings are Saltimbocca Romano (scaloppine of veal sautéed with mushrooms and fresh sage leaves, topped with prosciutto and mozzarella cheese, served with fresh sautéed spinach); Vitello Braciolette (rolled medallions of veal with prosciutto and fontina cheese, finished in a port wine sauce, served with fresh sautéed spinach); Tornado Rossini (beef tenderloin sautéed in a red wine sauce with wild mushrooms, served on garlic toast with shrimps and broccoli); and Cioppino (a classic Italian fish stew, with lobster, shrimps, scallops, clams, mussels and other seafood in a tomato broth, served with toasted bread and linguine). Both lunch and dinner menus offer a wide range of chicken, seafood, beef, veal and pasta entrees. All items on the menu are available for takeout.

Ristorante Daniela is conveniently located at 303 Main Street (Route 28), North Reading. Ample parking is available. They are open for lunch and dinner Monday through Saturday and dinner only on Sunday.

Li'L Red Schoolhouse

The Li'L Red Schoolhouse Early Childhood Center's President and Executive Director Alice L. Juchnevics-Kontos is dedicated to creating an environment that contributes to the social, emotional, physical, intellectual and aesthetic development of the child as well as meeting the community's needs for quality child care services. The staff consists of twenty experienced professionals qualified in early childhood education. They collaborate with the parents to facilitate all types of transitions and work closely with the family. All abilities and disabilities are welcome at this culturally diversified center.

The staff believes that the combination of personal and social support while learning in a non-competitive, developmentally appropriate environment is what makes their program successful. The groups consist of Pre-Nursery, Preschool, Pre-Kindergarten, a private kindergarten and School Age Child Care. The daily schedule consists of alternating periods of individual, small and large group activities, structured and non-structured time, and indoor and outdoor play.

The Li'L Red Schoolhouse also offers a summer Enrichment Day Camp with two week sessions from June 27 to August 22. This year's theme is America - From All Walks of Life. Field trips are part of this program.

For further information on any aspect of these programs, please call Alice Juchnevics-Kontos. Brochures are available explaining the programs offered.

Superintendent looks back

"It's hard to believe how many things I've done since I've got here," said Dr. McQuillan. "Or have had to deal with, too."

The Andover chapter of Dr. McQuillan's life approached its conclusion last Wednesday when he accepted the offer to become the next superintendent of the K-8 Lincoln school system. The Andover School Committee will meet tonight, Thursday, at 8 to develop a time frame for his replacement, and to discuss the formation of a search committee, said Mary Lyman, committee member.

It is not yet determined when Dr. McQuillan will begin in Lincoln, but by this time next year he will have assumed his new post.

In his job as Andover superintendent, Dr. McQuillan oversaw:

- The formation of a preventative maintenance program to prevent additional closings of schools and million-dollar maintenance project requests;
- The creation of a suicide task force;
- The passage of a $40.5 million school building program; and,
- The realignment of the schools curriculum in anticipation of state mandates.

In his private life, he watched for two years as his daughter suffered the effects of her medication, during times of which "I thought she might not live, truthfully," he said. His daughter's health was one of the chief reasons Dr. McQuillan never moved to Andover.

Yet, despite some of the system difficulties, the long commute and the longer hours, Dr. McQuillan expressed mixed feelings about leaving here.

Terry Perlmutter, Lincoln School Committee member and head of its search committee, said they had to encourage Dr. McQuillan to continue to apply because he was concerned about the effects his leaving would have on the Andover system.

"When the fruits of your labor just begin to come up and you've planted a lot of seeds, you want to be there for the harvest," said Dr. McQuillan.

But the opportunity in Lincoln was too much for him to turn down.

Lincoln is a K-8 system that offers Dr. McQuillan the chance to live closer to home, have more time in the classroom and likely make more money, he said.

But other issues, including the philosophical bent of the Lincoln system toward heterogeneous grouping may have influenced his decision, too.

Lloyd Willey, Andover committee member, downplayed the difference between the two communities by pointing out that there is only homogeneous grouping for math courses in Andover middle schools. Dr. McQuillan said this issue was not a chief factor in his decision but acknowledged that his thinking was more in line with that of Lincoln system members.

"I have to say Lincoln is geared toward heterogeneous grouping and inclusion. That's what Lincoln is all about," said Ms. Perlmutter. "It's consistent with his (Dr. McQuillan's) orientation."

"I think there are two issues at hand. One, the opportunity at Lincoln is unbelievable," said Bill Huston, committee member. "Two, it's a relationship with the School Committee."

In March, the committee approved a new three-year contract by a vote of 3-1-1. Since then, one of the contract's supporters has been replaced on the committee. Dr. McQuillan said that the Lincoln system is looking for a long-term commitment, but he could not give a time frame because it is currently under negotiation. It is clear, however, that his Lincoln contract will be longer than three years.

It is also clear that Lincoln is looking to realign its curriculum to coincide with the connection of its two facilities into one K-8 complex. Reorganization of curriculum, including long-term, community-supported and system-wide goals, has been an area of interest and accomplishment for Dr. McQuillan since before he became a doctor of education in 1984.

From 1970-1982, as director of English for grades 7-12, he reorganized the English curriculum in Plymouth Regional Schools. He continued his work over the next four years in Newton by developing and writing a curriculum for process writing, and from 1986-1990 he re-aligned the curriculum in Beverly, a system roughly the size of Andover.

Dr. McQuillan continued that work in Andover, creating a curriculum plan and curriculum cycle to analyze and address some of the need for change. He said he has tried to create a common educational direction and develop community-supported goals before potentially unpopular goals are mandated by the state.

"That, in a sense, was what I was trying to do - to be proactive, to get ahead of the curve," he said. "And I was."

But some of his ideas met opposition because they were labeled as outcome-based education initiatives, and the committee has never had a sufficient chance to address some of Dr. McQuillan's work. Dr. McQuillan said it will take about one more year to fully implement his plan and it will be up to the next superintendent to complete it if that is desired.

"I think Dr. McQuillan has had a very, very rough tenure in the town of Andover. I really feel he has never been given an opportunity to explain to the community at large his vision and mission for public education," said Mr. Huston.

In large part, said Dr. McQuillan, this was because of the many other issues facing the committee. But in Lincoln, curriculum alignment and analysis will be one of his top stated directives.

"Their philosophy, I think, is more consistent with mine, than this committee's. But I don't think that was an impediment," because Andover committee members were open about their disagreements, he said.

Sometime next year Dr. McQuillan will leave Andover and begin his work in Lincoln. As luck would have it, after being put on a new diet, his daughter's kidney functions appear to be returning to normal.

So he is looking forward to working in Lincoln. "This is an opportunity I'm not going to get again," said Dr. McQuillan.

Tennis is Alison Georgian's game

Stories by Alix Driscoll

Name: Alison Georgian.

Age: 18.

Home: 11 Lovejoy Road.

Co-captain: Andover High tennis. Number-1 seeded player on AHS team.

Years playing tennis: 10.

Record, including tournaments: 15-2.

"I chose tennis because it's a sport I can do for the rest of my life, and I love tennis," says Alison Georgian, co-captain of the Andover High School women's varsity tennis team and its top-seeded player.

"I like it because you can set your own goals, and it's more individual."

Ms. Georgian, 18, used to compete in gymnastics and soccer, but now only plays tennis. She plays up to eight hours a day when she can, and it has paid off. It has netted her 15 wins this season, with only two losses.

Three-time Merrimack Valley Conference Player-of-the-Year, Ms. Georgian won close to 50 matches during her AHS career.

Preparing for matches

During the years, Ms. Georgian has honed some skills to help her develop the mental toughness to compete so successfully for AHS. She says she has only one focus - her commitment to the game.

"While doing the point, whether I win or lose, I still love the game," she says.

In addition, she adds that she glares at her opponent when she is ready to serve.

"I just think about how badly I want to beat her. That gets rid of the nervousness," she says.

Summer tennis goal

This summer, Ms. Georgian is competing as an individual to obtain a women's rating with the New England Lawn Tennis Association. She used to be ranked number one in New England in the 18-B level, and number 16 in the more difficult 18-A rating.

But now, she must compete in the women's open division, because she will be 19 in December. Her long-term goal is to reach the top of the New England women's ranking.

Why has she been so successful?

"My parents don't put any pressure on me at all. They've been so good to me. The sport was my own choice," she says.

She says her dad, Ted, is very supportive and helps her not to dwell on problems. Her mom, Colleen, understands tennis well and attends most of her games.

From emerald diamond to the Emerald Isle

Name: Toby Guzowski.

Age: 18.

AHS sports: baseball, football.

Position: First base, former pitcher, .385 average in AHS baseball, spring 1994.

For Toby Guzowski it's been a championship season. After honing his baseball skills playing on town teams for 12 years, the AHS first baseman helped his team earn another Eastern Mass North title.

And now, after punctuating a splendid season with an impressive battery of hits, Mr. Guzowski traded his first-base mitt for a pigskin and a series of football games in Ireland.

He just returned from an eight-day tourney with the 30 highly-skilled Massachusetts players competing against the Galway Tornadoes and a visiting U.S. team from Minnesota. The Galway Tornadoes, an Irish professional football team of players ages 18-30, follow the American National Collegiate Athletic Association rules of play.

Next year, Mr. Guzowski will attend Phillips Academy for a post-graduate year. He thought he was missing out on a good opportunity by going directly on to Union College and instead, opted for a year on the hill says his sister, Kim Guzowski.

"It was the most fascinating class," he says enthusiastically.

After his year at Phillips Academy, he says he will study political science. His dream is to teach on the college- or prep-school level.

Mr. Guzowski's been a valued player and co-captain of AHS football. He says he plans to compete in both sports in college.

Baseball plus academics

Mr. Guzowski says he turned on the academics in his senior year, earning honor roll distinction. When he took a demanding AP level course at AHS, he fell in love with United States history.

He says the level one Odyssey course, focusing on dominant philosophical and religious ideas, thrilled him.

Stacey Lavoie is good at jumping hurdles

Name: Stacey Lavoie.

Age: 18.

Home: 5 Stevens Circle.

Co-captain: AHS girls track.

Specialty: Hurdles, high jump.

Years of track: Four.

"Eat an orange. Sit by the hurdles. Stretch out. Do sprints to get loose." That's how Stacie Lavoie prepares for the high hurdles. And she's pretty good at sailing over 10 hurdles, 84-meters apart on a 100-meter course.

Ms. Lavoie was named to the MVC All-Conference track team for 100-meter high hurdles, and received the J.E. Collins Memorial Award for Outstanding Indoor/Outdoor Competitor in track at the recent team banquet.

Staying on track

"This town breeds extraordinary athletes," Ms. Lavoie says.

There's a strong tradition of athletics in Andover, especially excellence in track, due to Dick Collins, the coach, she says.

"He's a legend, and so is his team."

To prove it, the Lady Warriors track team tied for second in the All-State Meet. That's in addition to winning the State Class B title this year.

'This town breeds extraordinary athletes.'

Stacey Lavoie

An honor roll student, she received the Harold "Hal" Wennik social studies award and Eugene V. Lovely award for excellence in athletics, at the AHS senior awards brunch.

Coaching in her future

Ms. Lavoie will attend UMass Amherst, School of Arts and Sciences, in the fall on a "small sports scholarship." She's interested in architecture and possibly teaching. She says she Rebecca Goldenberg, a multi-event standout on Andover High's Merrimack Valley Conference and State Class B champion girls' track team this past spring, recently placed 22nd in a field of 105 girls at the annual two-day Eastern Mass. North Sectional Heptathlon Championships at Weston High.

Goldenberg, who will be a senior at AHS next fall, chalked up a school record 3,141 points in the seven events contested. She was 18th after the first day with 1,943 points over four events.

The North champion, senior All-Scholastic Katie Kiladis of Framingham High, scored 4,389 points.

"Rebecca enjoyed it so much she's decided to enter another heptathlon in July," said Lady Warriors' assistant coach, Art Iworsley.

That competition, the USA Track and Field Developmental Heptathlon, is scheduled for July 2-3 at Hingham High.

In the recent North-meet at Weston, Goldenberg produced the following times and distances in the seven events: Cleared 4'3" (1.3 meters) in the high jump; threw the shot put 24'3" (7.40 meters); threw the javelin 59'9" (18.04 meters); soared 14'9" (4.4 meters) in the long jump; ran the 200 meter dash in 29.0, the 100-meter high hurdles in 16.8 and the 800 meters in 2:44.9.

Leif Dormsjo, who just completed his freshman year at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., earned his first varsity letter in lacrosse this spring.

The midfielder saw action in 16 of the Cardinal's 17 contests. He took nine shots at goal over the course of the season, scored four goals and had one assist.

Mr. Dorm-

sjo is a 1993 graduate of Phillips Academy where he was a three-time letter winner in lacrosse and a four-time letterwinner in ice hockey. He is the son of Bruce and Dianne Hearey of Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Dave Shaffer of Andover High shot a 38-40-78 to finish among the leaders at the recent Massachusetts State Division I Interscholastic Individual Golf Championships at Westover Golf Club in Granby.

Shaffer was five strokes off the lead as defending champ Jim Driscoll of Pembroke High carded a 36-37-73 to win top honors for the second straight year.

Shaffer was the Golden Warriors' number-one player and an MVC All-Conference choice last fall.

Veteran Andover High teacher-coach Dick Collins had a very big week recently.

In a seven-day span he was named Eastern Mass. Girls' Track Coach-of-the-Year for the 1994 spring season, and he also directed the North All-Star team to a 21-13 victory over the South in the 16th annual Shriners' Football Classic at Boston University's Nickerson Field.

Collins' AHS girls' track team swept almost everything in sight this spring, winning a second straight Merrimack Valley Conference Large School Division championship and the State Class B team title in addition to placing first at the Wilmington Invitational, State Coaches Relays and Andover Boosters Invitational.

Amanda Camelio, the only girl in the Andover Little League for 10-12-year-olds, plays right field for the Indians.

Amanda Camelio is the one with the ponytail

Amanda Camelio is the only girl in the traditionally all-boy baseball league

By Sally Stryker

The Indians took the field for the next inning. The scene was as it should be — gloves in hand, hats on securely, ponytails in place.

Ponytails in place? On a Little League baseball team?

Of course, if you're Amanda Camelio.

Amanda broke into the traditionally all-boys league this year as the only girl and one of only 11 10-year-olds selected for 70 openings this season. The Andover league of 10-12 year-old kids has only seen two other girls achieve the same feat, but they were older than Amanda.

Did trying out for this mostly-male club faze the aspiring baseball player?

"I wasn't that scared," answered Amanda.

"We had to catch and throw with each coach, hit 10 balls, then the coaches pick."

Amanda was chosen by coach Dan Hughes.

"She was not the last player I picked," Coach Hughes said.

'At the first practice games they ignored me, but I didn't really care.'

Now I feel like part of the team.'

Amanda Camelio

The Indians ended their season with a 7-9 record, which Coach Hughes said wasn't bad for a team with five 10-year-olds, four 11-year-olds and only three 12-year-olds. He said Amanda did as well as any first-year player in the league.

"I thought she did pretty well. She got a couple hits. She's pretty fast," Coach Hughes said. "She hits the ball well and she improved significantly as the season progressed. By the time she is 12, she ought to be terrorizing the boys in that league."

Amanda had two hits and eight walks, with an on-base percentage over .400.

She's a good little player, Coach

Hughes said.

Watching one of the last few games of the Indians' season, one wouldn't know the trials Amanda experienced when she first joined the team.

In addition to hearing the chides from players on the opposite team, such as, "You have a girl on your team?" Amanda had to earn the confidence of her own teammates — boys who weren't sure of her abilities.

"At the first practice games they ignored me, but I didn't really care," she said.

"Now I feel like part of the team," Amanda said.

An inattentive onlooker would hardly notice any difference between her and the other players, save for the ponytail, which she wants to keep at least until the end of the season, "so people will know I'm a girl," she said.

Fellow Indians showed their support for their teammate by chanting, "Amanda, Amaaandaa," as she stepped up to the plate to bat.

Out in right field, Amanda's position, she tossed the ball back and forth with equal ease and finesse of the other players.

Amanda makes it clear that she doesn't want special attention from the coaches.

"It makes me feel better if I'm treated like a normal person," she said.

What about the future?

Amanda said that although she once had aspirations to become the first woman in the major leagues, she is now thinking she may turn her attention toward something "more worthwhile."

But she's definitely going to keep at it until she is 12.

The Lady Warriors also tied for second behind Falmouth at the All-State Meet.

On the gridiron, Collins has been head coach at Andover High since 1959 and has directed his teams to numerous championships, including a pair of Eastern Mass. Division 2 Super Bowl crowns, and more than 200 victories.

Collins is a member of both the Massachusetts and National Track Coaches Halls of Fame and the Massachusetts Football Coaches Hall of Fame.

He was MVP of the 1974 ECAC Division II championship game. He received the Irv Olin Award as the team's outstanding basketball player and was the team's co-captain. Mr. Per-

Dan Queen netted himself tennis success

Name: Dan Queen.
Age: 18.
Home: 5 Timothy Drive.
Co-captain: AHS boys tennis.
Years playing tennis: 12.

Dan Queen, number-one-seeded player and co-captain of the High School boys tennis team, says he has had a great four years in the tennis scene.

He has won all but two matches in Merrimack Valley Conference circuit during that time. He just kept moving up the tennis ladder, from third place in his sophomore year to first place this season.

He loves the challenge of singles matches.

"I need to play someone better than me to get focused. I like being the underdog," he says.

Four very full years

Mr. Queen could have competed at tennis tournaments every weekend, but chose not to do that.

"I could have played every weekend, but never wanted to miss high school," he says.

During the winter of '94, he kept his tennis arm in shape by working with the Snow-busters. That's a group of about 40 AHS students he helped organize who shoveled walks and driveways for elderly residents all around town, free of charge.

Mr. Queen competed in the Mr. AHS contest. He coached varsity basketball at Pike School, working with the guards.

AHS boys tennis has dominated this region, and the team he lead has not lost in 40 straight regular matches.

That's because Andover has better facilities, and players start younger than players in other towns, he says. Many attend sports camps. In addition, he says, this town contributes well-maintained courts. After Warriors tennis

Mr. Queen says he plans to study U. S. history or journalism at Union College, in New York, with an eye to a career in sports journalism or sports broadcasting, or teaching U. S. history and coaching. At Union, he will compete in tennis and soccer.

This summer, he will continue to hone his skills on the court by teaching tennis at Brooks School day camp.

Mr. Queen is the son of Jeffrey and Mimi Queen, of Timothy Drive.

Georgian thrives on competition

Great climate for athletes

AHS has a good reputation and that helps an athlete get farther ahead, Ms. Georgian says about the push and support to grow great athletes at the school.

"It's the atmosphere, the competitive edge. It's competitive, but there are lots of team friendships."

Excelling in sports complements excellence in classes at the High School.

"Doing sports helps relieve stress. It helps to have sports and academics," she says.

At AHS's prize day in early June, she received the Donald D. Dunn Award for excellence in physical education.

Ms. Georgian will study at University of New Hampshire next year. She says she will certainly compete in tennis, but is undecided about her course of studies.

She hopes to accomplish a five foot high jump in college. She's close to it now, at 4'10".

Chamber hosts Summer Spectacular

The Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce will sponsor its Summer Spectacular on Monday, July 25, at Indian Ridge Country Club.

A silent auction is part of the day's events. It will start at 4 p.m., with a preview from noon to 3:30 p.m.

The Chamber is asking for contributions of services or goods for this auction. In lieu of these donations, businesses or individuals are encouraged to make a financial contribution that will be used to purchase a major prize in the donor's name.

As a part of the Summer Spectacular, the chamber will offer three memberships-for-a-day at Indian Ridge.

For $129, a club-member-for-a-day may choose option #1, golf, pool, tennis, clubhouse facilities, breakfast and BBQ, with shotgun golf for prizes.

For $59, option #2, a player may choose tennis, pool, use of clubhouse facilities, breakfast and BBQ.

For $35 each, option #3, a player may choose BBQ and yard games.

The silent auction is open to all. Players may sponsor a tee for $100 or sponsor a cart for $50.

To donate goods, services or financial contributions, or to sign up to play, call 686-0900, or write Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce, 364 Essex St., Lawrence 01840.

Andover is represented on the racing circuit, from Erik Day drives racing karts

By Cindy Garrett Rayner

Much like the racing karts he drives, Erik Day's racing has evolved from simple recreation to sophisticated competition.

Mr. Day, formerly of Andover and owner of Day Racing in Dundee Park, began autocross racing at UMass Lowell while pursuing an industrial engineering degree. On Sundays, in the university parking lot, Mr. Day would race his 1971 Mustang around cones to play beat-the-clock against other racers' times.

"If you race against another car you run the risk of denting up your own car that gets you to school the next day."

He later became president of the University Of Massachusetts Sports Car Club.

Now he races his racing kart, "the Relic," all over the country - Florida, North Carolina, West Virginia, Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania. Unlike the original go-karts, simple steel-tubed frames with a motor attached, Mr. Day's modern marvel has digital gauges, four-wheel disc brakes, chrome-moly (strong steel) tube frames and a Fiberglass body.

Because of the rapid evolution of the racing kart, it's a perfect forum for innovators. There are engineers who try their inventions out in wind tunnels before bringing them out onto the track.

"The people (who race racing karts) are great. I make a lot of friends and many of them are really smart. You want to pick their brain for hours. They think of making a newfangled contraption to make them go faster, so they do it and they bring it to the race that week and hope they win."

Erik Day is obviously keeping up technologically - even in his revamped Relic - because on the national enduro series tracks, Mr. Day is winning. He took home two trophies from the New Hampshire International Speedway in Loudon, N.H., in May.

Describing his thrill of success, Mr. Day relives his New Hampshire dream race: "I blew the field away. I went out there with old tires and the next thing I knew I couldn't even see second place."

On other winning occasions he remembers "looking back and seeing all those racers wishing they were me."

But along with the joys of racing come the challenges.

"It takes a lot of concentration keeping the car on the track. Imagine going around a clover leaf at 100 mph sideways, and all squirrely on the corners, for 45 minutes."

Or how about traveling halfway across the country for the Road America Race in Wisconsin last year and getting a flat tire in the first lap. (This year he placed third and fourth.)

The other elements of racing that Mr. Day really abhors are "those concrete walls around the corners."

"I want to know what sick person thought of that."

He has seen enough injuries second hand that he wants those walls changed as soon as possible.

This hobby has made sizable dents in Mr. Day's bank account. Each week-end trip costs at least $700-$800.

"That's why I only race once a month."

The secret to his success is keeping up with the maintenance.

"The car has to come apart and you have to replace the parts that are worn."

That means replacing spindles, tires, pistons and rings regularly. Plus those technological changes, such as a nose job or a rebuilt engine, and the list goes on and on.

To support his habit, he works at his own business in Dundee Park, off Essex Street, building hard-disc drives, and he gets some financial backing from Auto-Care Co. of Lawrence.

Mr. Day sees the maintenance costs as tuition.

"It's like going to the College of Racing. Many of the big name racers started out with a racing kart - and raced the same tracks at the same speeds."

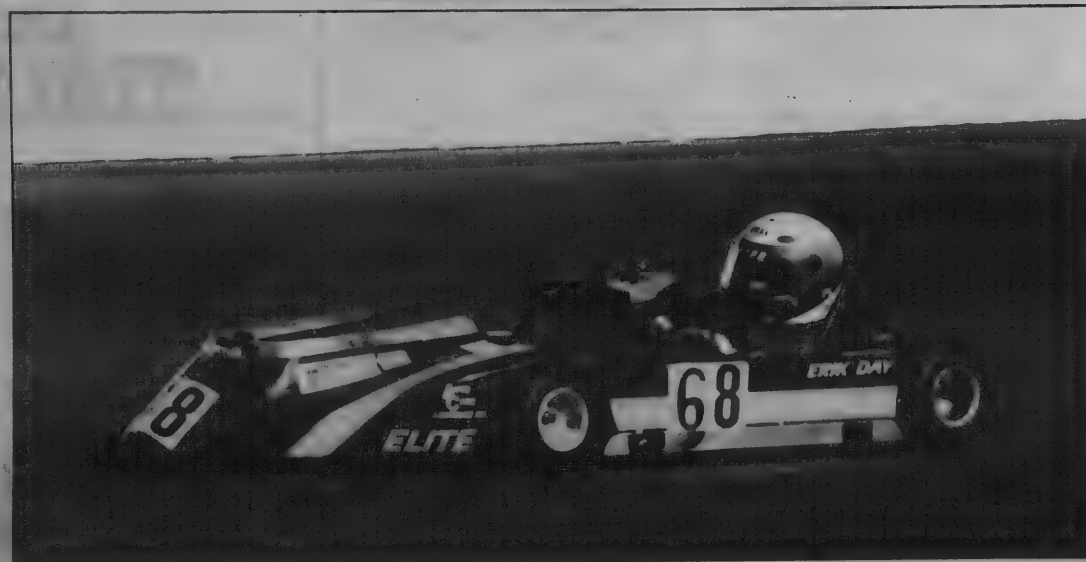

So Erik Day is just warming up his racing engines. Stay tuned for the next stage in his, and the racing kart's, racing evolution.

Steve Leed has gone from race driver to race sponsor

By Cindy Garret Rayner

As a little boy, Steve Leed, owner of Royal Jewelers on Main Street, would sit in his back-seat perch and rattle off the models and years of the cars passing by. His dad was a great tutor in car trivia since he was a car lover himself.

But right before Mr. Leed got his driver's license, his father intentionally sold the Triumph TR4A Mr. Leed had been lusting after. He had to make his own car choices (and later business choices). So, Mr. Leed got his first wheels: a Chevrolet Corvair van; then a Volkswagen Beetle; then a Saab 99; then Italian and German cars.

His strong interest in European cars contributed to his being asked, in 1979, to be a crew chief for a Can/Am Racing Team, which is a stepping stone to the Formula 1 and the Indy 500.

After that he was hooked.

"The excitement of the pit and the smell of gasoline led me to a five-day course in small formula racing at Bertil Roos' School of Racing," says Mr. Leed.

Much to the students' dismay, that first day they were put behind a desk instead of a steering wheel and taught the basics of driving. There was training in turning, safety and the ocular technique, which stresses the importance of seeing all around you when you drive. The second phase of the class was practicing these basic driving skills on the Pocono Track, in Eastern Pennsylvania, in a nondescript Ford Coupe.

"I think it was a Pinto or something."

Although a lot of the techniques Mr. Leed learned at racing school are transferable to street driving, the speeds at which he races are not.

"It's a lot different when you're racing on a track with experienced drivers all around you. When you're on the road, you don't know the experience level of the people. I have a respect for the road."

When Mr. Leed had to make the decision about whether to pursue a racing career or stick with the family jewelry business, he chose to focus on the business, which he owns with his sister, Paula, and mother, Sel. But he hasn't let his racing dreams speed away from him.

Mr. Leed stays in touch with his racing contacts from Goodyear, and attends races regularly. You can find him in the pit of many races, including Formula 1 and Indy 500, where he could be timing or flagging, because "I'm not the best mechanic."

Incorporating Mr. Leed's business and pleasure, Royal Jewelers has sponsored a Ferrari-powered GTP car at Lyme Rock, Conn., and has also been associate sponsor of a car in the Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona race.

Against his sister's wishes, Steve Leed doesn't always stay off the track.

"It worries me because it's a dangerous sport. He's a great brother and I don't want him to leave me stranded. Personally I think working in retail is living on the edge, but my brother has to race cars."

Mr. Leed gets to race his own late '60s BMW Schnitzer in vintage races two to three times a year. He goes at speeds of close to 160+ mph.

"It takes a lot of concentration. As I drive, I repeat what gear I'm in - 4, 4, 4 - but I love the speed, the danger and the feeling of driving proficiency."

He has had drinks and shared racing stories with Alain Prost, Ayrton Senna, Jackie Stewart and Mario Andretti.

His favorite cars are still the '50s and '60s European cars, "when there was the most evolution." And he also loves the '50s American cars, "with the big fins."

"I think that we end up having favorite cars because that vehicle reminds us of that time and how we felt then. It's nostalgic, bringing back the great memories of life."

Rockies take Minor League championship title in hard fought game

In a hard-fought Minor League championship game, the National League champion Rockies defeated the American League champion Mariners, 3-games-to-2, to take the town championship last weekend.

On Monday, June 20, both teams earned their place at the championship game by winning their divisions.

The Mariners, coached by Carl Berger, faced the Angels, led by Coach Jeff Dennis, at West Elementary School. Greg Drapeau started as pitcher for the Mariners and hurled six innings. Angels' pitchers, Brent Eckel and Seth Geiser struck out nine batters. Jimmy Ponder and Corey Dennis each knocked in two runs for the Angels. Sean O'Day and Mike Corey provided strong hitting and defense for the Mariners. The Angels loaded the bases in their final at-bat, but the Mariner's defense and Drapeau's strong arm retired the final batter, preserving the win with a score of 5-4.

In the National League, the Rockies, coached by Mark DeFrancisco, faced Coach Robert Seiden's Giants at South School. The Rockies broke out on top early with hits by Aaron Litvin, Justin Rego, T.J. Tanner and Jessie DeFrancisco. Giants' pitcher Stephen Stone, with help from strong defensive plays by Charlie Aloviseetti, Aaron Seiden and Matthew Sullivan, held the aggressive Rockies' offense to a two-run lead going into the fifth. Justin Rego went the distance for the Rockies, striking out 11 as the Rockies clinched the National League title with a score of 5-2.

Championship game

Chandler Field hosted a large turnout for the the championship game.

The Rockies had two runs in the first inning with hits by Jesse Bardo, Justin Rego and T.J. Tanner. The game settled into a defensive struggle through the fifth inning with both teams held scoreless by outstanding defensive plays and solid pitching, with Jake Delaney on the mound for the Rockies and the combined efforts of Nick Berger and Mike Corey for the Mariners. The Mariners tied the game in the fifth inning with hits by Mike Burnett, Mike Corey and Nick Berger. The Rockies clinched the title with a winning run by Jessie DeFrancisco who, after stealing second and third, scored on a single to left by John Ristuccia.

Coach DeFrancisco's Rockies were boosted to a fine season with excellent effort by Matthew Mancinelli, James Maffione, Andrew Delollis, Travis Volpe, Trevor Thibault and Matthew Brenner.

Coach Carl Berger attributes the Mariners' success to the outstanding efforts of all his players, including Adam Couture, Erkki Oman, Anthony Silva, David Chomicz and Lee Klarman, led by tri-captains Alex Berger, Mike Burnett and Chris Brown.

Pirates take Town Little League championship, 3-2

The National League's Pirates won the Andover Majors Little League Town Championship last Friday night, June 24, beating the American League Champion Red Sox at Chandler Field.

The Pirates and Red Sox each had the best records in their respective leagues for both halves of the season, so the championship playoff was destined to produce outstanding baseball. The best-of-three series was a competitive matchup between the two league champions and resulted in three exciting and dramatic games, which fans had expected.

The Red Sox won the first game 3-2 in a pitching duel between Charles Daher of the Red Sox and Paul Wysocki of the Pirates. In the second game, the Pirates tied the series behind Ben Urbell, who pitched six innings for the Pirates in a 10-3 win. In the Following are accounts of late regular-season Andover High boys and girls track meets not previously published in the Townsmen.

Andover girls 88 Methuen 48

The Lady Warriors dispersed any lingering doubts about who was the best team in the MVC this spring, as they built a modest lead in the field events and went on to crush previously-undefeated Methuen in the season-ending showdown for the Large School Division dual meet championship.

Andover, 4-0-0 in the division and 6-1-0 overall, led 34-20 after the six field events and then outpointed the Rangers 54-28 in the running events.

Captain Lavoie had a huge afternoon, contributing a victory in the 100-meter high hurdles (15.7) and a second place in the high jump (4'10") to her sprint relay anchor leg.

214 take part in 3rd annual South Church Steeple Chase

Two hundred fourteen runners left the starting line in front of South Church on Saturday morning, June 18, for the third annual South Church Steeple Chase.

Initiated as a fund-raiser for the restoration of the South Church steeple, the race this year raised $1,260 for the project.

Local merchants donated the breakfast provided for the runners after the race.

Mike Cooney of Chelmsford was overall men's winner of the 5-kilometer event in 15:35; Susan Trudel of Lowell won the women's division in 19:11; with Kathy Geary of Andover second in 19:32.

The following Andover residents completed the race: Stephen Anderson, Steve Connolly, Bill Marlow, Tim Kearns, Matt Herling, Joe Nicolaisen,

Cal Mutti, at right, pastor at South Church, was hoping this 1800s-era key, found during renovation work on the steeple's old steps, would fit the front door to the church. It didn't, but Rev. Mutti would still like to know what the key fits.

AHS JVs end season with 8-1 win over Phillips

By Rick Harrison

Justin Bastinelli, Marc O'Sullivan and Tom Clarke combined for a four-hitter as the Andover High junior varsity baseball team capped its 1994 season with an 8-1 non-league victory over intra-town rival Phillips Academy recently. That win, along with losses to Lowell (10-2) and Chelmsford (7-0), left Coach Dan Grams' squad with a final overall record of 13-5-1.

Coach Grams had two reasons to celebrate at the end of the season. In addition to the winning record he and wife Annette (Silva) Grams became parents of their first child, daughter Lauren Danielle, in late May.

Andover 8

Phillips Academy 1

Justin Bastinelli improved to 2-0 on the mound, yielding two hits during his stint, while mop-up relievers Marc O'Sullivan and Tom Clarke surrendered one hit each.

O'Sullivan was making his JV debut after being elevated from the freshman team, which finished 8-7, while Clarke struck out two in his one-inning of work.

The young Warriors spotted PA a 1-0 lead in the second, and then pulled away to victory with three runs in the third, one in the fifth and four more in the sixth inning at the Andover High field.

Pete Daniels keyed the third stanza rally with a two-run single, while Ted Witman highlighted the sixth frame with a two-run single.

Dave Charland and Witman sparked the winners' 10-hit attack with two safeties each, while other hits were contributed by Dave Salafia (RBI), Ed Seero, Nate Roberts, Chris Kearn and Steve Vickers (up from freshman team).

Defensive standouts included shortstop Charland and second baseman Dana DiFiore, who turned a 6-4-3 double play, catcher Daniels and pitcher O'Sullivan.

Two of the Phillips Academy JV hits were laced by Andover residents Andy Henderson and Tim McGovern.

Lowell 10

Andover 2

Lowell, which had tied Andover 8-8 the first time around, scored in every inning except the second and had three-run outbursts in the first and fourth frames.

Andover managed just four singles in the contest, one each by Dave Salafia, Andy Torrisi, Ted Witman and Dave Charland.

The pitching was handled by starter Mark Langone (2-3 record), George Secchiaroli and Tom Clarke.

Chelmsford 7

Andover 0

The young Warriors never got untracked against the Lion cubs, who edged them 3-1 the first time around.

Andover collected just three hits, a pair of singles by Dana DiFiore and a double by Dave Salafia.

Starting pitcher Tom Clarke went five innings and took the loss, while George Secchiaroli and Justin Bastinelli both worked in relief.

Ironstone Farm hosts young riders

Ironstone Farm hosted the 11th annual Mini-Show, so named because of the size of the young riders, on Sunday, June 19. Ninety children, ages 3 to 12, rode Ironstone Farm's horses and ponies to music, in games and over obstacle courses at the traditional event.

The annual Mini-Show and its program Yearbook are the major fundraisers for the Challenge Unlimited therapeutic riding program. Challenge Unlimited, founded by Dick Donovan at Ironstone in 1983, serves more than 300 handicapped people weekly, offering "Hippotherapy" or "treatment with the help of a horse."

As a non-profit organization, Challenge Unlimited is continually seeking sponsorships for groups and individuals who will benefit from this form of therapy. The 1994 Yearbook was a joint effort by parents, volunteers and friends, who raised more than $30,000 in tuition sponsorships through the book.

The Mini-Show includes riders from the Challenge Unlimited program and Ironstone's non-handicapped program competing on an equal basis and, on that day, these children are helped by a volunteer corps of more than 50 individuals, many of whom are riders or former riders in CU.

According to volunteer Bevolyn Oliver of Andover, "At Ironstone Farm

everyone pitches in - everyone is equal. However, there is one person on this Fathers' Day that gets a chance to shine above the rest. He is the father whose rock skips the farthest across the Ironstone Pond."

The following Andover young people participated: Tina Jette, Christopher Baker, Emily Shepperd, Kristy Rudick, Dina Carusi, Samantha Hughes, Alexa Krieger, Stacey Luti, Eliza Rakip, Jean Marie Ribiero, Daniel Sciabarassi, Nicole Murphy, Douglas Cooper, Chris Carey, Kelly Wallace, Jessica Taylor, Corey Perkins, Patrick Busby, Alysson Slopes, Rebecca Scully, Ashley Faulk, Heather Foster, Andrea Martin, Jenny Determan, Clara Cohen, Anna Radocckia, Kim Cronin, Jamie Bauer, Justin Crocker, Vanessa Hsia, Joshua Shaby, Christina Leber, Alicia Michel, Laura Van Houten, Chrissy Cronin, Alyssa Small, Amanda Connor, Jeff Goodell, Andrew Smith, Sha-keer Hazarika, Scott Espinola, Jillian Koravos, Tamsin Tyler and Jeffrey Sleight.

Skydiver

Kasie Kearins, a sophomore diving for the UNH Wildcats, wound up a successful season this year, placing in the top eight at the North Atlantic Conference meet and qualifying and placing in the ECAC meet in New Jersey.

Ms. Kearins was recently elected captain of the swimming and diving team for next season. She also received the most improved award for her consistent performance, placing first and second on both 1- and 3-meter boards in most meets, raising her points considerably since last season and learning new dives.

For the summer, Ms. Kearins, a communications major with a 3.0 gpa, is working at CBS, Channel 7 in Boston, and lifeguarding and waitressing at Indian Ridge Country Club.

Legion Post 8 launches season with five wins

By Rick Harrison

The Andover American Legion Post 8 baseball team is off to a flying start.

The locals, winners of three Essex County Zone 8-A titles in the last four years and qualifiers for the State Elite Eight Tournament in 1992 and 1993, launched the season with five straight wins over Winthrop (6-4), Beverly (8-4), archrival Lawrence (8-5), Danvers (13-2) and Swampscott, (10-9). The 17-player Post 8 squad is comprised of Andover residents from six public, private and Catholic schools.

Representing Eastern Mass. Division 1 North champ and State semifinalist Andover High are Matt Wolcott, Paul Allard, Tom Gardner, Jeff Lembo, Dana McCann, Brian Tisbert, Dave Salafia and Chris Kearn.

Players from New England Prep School Tournament finalist Phillips Academy are Todd Harris, Ryan Jacobson, Hugh Quattlebaum and Tim McGovern.

Completing the team are Alex Marshall and Rick Mendez (Cushing Academy), Matt Marvin (St. John's Prep in Danvers), Ryan Jacobson (Austin Prep) and Justin Connors (military school in Virginia).

From this group, Flanagan will attend Wesleyan College next fall, Marvin is headed to Williams College, Allard will enroll at Westfield State College, Lembo is bound for Assumption College and Wolcott has mentioned Eckerd College.

Last season

Key graduates from last year's 15-7-3 team include Justin Hesenius (Rollins College), Gus Quattlebaum (Davidson) and recent high school grads Todd Murray, Mike Sullivan, Toby Guzowski and Bob Daley.

Murray will likely attend Providence College in the fall, while Sullivan is headed to Amherst College and Guzowski will prep at Phillips Academy.

Post 8 began last season with seven straight wins, prior to a streak-breaking 7-3 loss to Salem, and finished the regular season 11-4-1.

The locals beat Arlington in a best-of-3 State Tournament preliminary round series that actually took five games (two 11-inning ties replayed), and reached the State finals with a two game sweep of Reading Post 62 by 14-9 and 15-11 scores.

In the double-elimination State tourney, Andover lost 7-2 to Northampton and 13-12 in a wild battle with Worcester South.

Schedule

Manager Joe Iarrobino's Post 8 squad (5-0) returned to action last night against Lynn Gautreau at Fraser Field, and tomorrow night Andover plays under the lights at East Boston (8 p.m.).

The next home game at Andover High is Wednesday, July 6 versus Methuen Post 122 at 6 p.m.

Earlier games against Middleton and Peabody had to be rescheduled when Andover High's season was extended by its success in the MFAA Tournament.

This year's District 8 playoffs will begin July 23, with the State Sectionals opening July 26.

The State Championship Tournament is Aug. 5-12 at Adams Field in Quincy, the Northeast Regionals Aug. 19-23 in Warwick, R.I. and the Legion World Series Aug. 26-30 at Boyertown, Pa.

Andover 6

Winthrop 4

Dana McCann's bases-loaded two-run single in the bottom of the sixth erased a 4-3 Andover deficit, as Post 8 rallied to edge Winthrop in the season opener at Andover High.

Veteran righthander Matt Marvin (1-0) went the seven-inning distance on the mound, yielding six hits while walking five and striking out one. He threw 110 pitches and all four Winthrop runs were unearned.

Andover jumped ahead 1-0 in the first frame when leadoff batter Todd Harris walked, Jeff Lembo beat out a bunt single, Rick Mendez drew a one-out walk to load the bases, and Winthrop pitcher Dan Godfrey issued a two-out walk to Tom Gardner forcing home the run.

In the winner's third, McCann rapped a leadoff single and eventually scored on an error by the pitcher to make it 2-0. Post 8 upped the lead to 3-0 in the fourth with another unearned run. Lembo was hit by a pitch, stole second, took third on a passed ball and crossed on an error by the catcher.

Marvin sailed through the first two innings, helped by a Harris-to-Mendez double play ending the second, and he worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the third created by an error, single and walk.

Winthrop, however, batted around in the fifth and grabbed a 4-3 lead with four unearned runs. Two walks, two singles and two Andover errors combined to do the damage.

Post 8 rallied for the victory in the sixth, loading the bases with one out on another bunt single by Lembo, first-pitch single to center by Brian Flanagan and walk to Mendez.

McCann followed with his clutch single to left, rescuing Lembo and Flanagan with the tying and go-ahead runs, and Paul Allard plated the insurance run by lofting a sacrifice fly to center field.

Winthrop did not threaten in the seventh despite a leadoff single by Joe Barressi.

Lembo and McCann finished with two hits each, while Todd Harris contributed a double and Alex Marshall singled.

Flanagan played a solid defensive game at second base with three putouts and two assists, while catcher Allard threw out the only Winthrop runner who tried to steal.

Andover 8

Beverly 4

Back-to-back four-run uprisings in the fifth and sixth innings broke open a pitcher's duel and lifted Post 8 to its second straight triumph.

Beverly carried a 1-0 lead into the top of the fifth at the Beverly High field, Andover limited to a pair of harmless singles by Brian Flanagan with two out in the first and Jeff Lembo to open the fourth.

Justin Connors was also cruising in his Legion pitching debut, the 6'5" righthander fanning the side in the first and second innings.

A walk, single and wild pitch produced the first run of the game in the Beverly third.

Alex Marshall started Andover's four-run fifth frame with a one-out walk on a 3-2 pitch. Singles by Connors and Todd Harris loaded the bases, Lembo tied it with a suicide squeeze bunt that he also beat out for a hit, and Rick Mendez followed with a long two-out triple to right-center which cleared the bases and gave Post 8 a 4-1 edge.

Connors breezed through the bottom of the fifth, registering his eighth and ninth strikeouts. In the Andover sixth, nine batters came to the plate and the lead swelled to 8-1.

Post 8 loaded the bases on leadoff walks to Dana McCann, Paul Allard and a bunt single by 16-year-old Brian Tisbert. Marshall lashed a two-run single, Tisbert scored on a passed ball, and Marshall later crossed on a wild pitch.

Beverly chased Connors in the bottom of the sixth, scoring three runs on a single, double, triple and walk.

Lefthander Ryan Jacobson recorded the final out of the inning, and blanked the home team in the seventh despite issuing two walks.

Connors (1-0) earned the pitching victory, permitting only four hits and two earned runs while whiffing 10 and walking five in 5.2 innings. He threw 105 pitches.

Lembo and Flanagan led the nine-hit attack with two safeties each.

Allard gunned down another would-be basestealer, and Harris was sharp at short where he handled four chances flawlessly (two assists, two putouts).

Andover 8

Lawrence 5

A gritty complete-game pitching performance by Matt Wolcott (1-0) keyed victory No. 3 over archrival Lawrence Post 15 under the lights at Mark Devlin Field.

Wolcott surrendered 13 hits and two earned runs, walking three and striking out seven while throwing 129 pitches.

Lawrence stranded nine runners on base and never led in the game.

Andover scored all its runs in the first four innings, pouncing on Post 15 starter Matt Cassano of Central Catholic for three quick runs in the top of the first.

Todd Harris walked, Jeff Lembo was hit by a pitch, Brian Flanagan legged out a sacrifice bunt for a single, Rick Mendez hoisted a sacrifice fly to right field, and Tom Gardner stroked a two-run single to right-center.

Alex Marshall singled to start the second stanza, stole second base, took third on an overthrow and scored on a passed ball for a 4-0 lead.

Lawrence notched an unearned run in the bottom of the second, but Post 8 retaliated with two more in the third.

Flanagan singled, Mendez walked and Dana McCann beat out a bunt single to load the bases. Gardner's infield grounder forced Flanagan at the plate, but Paul Allard dropped a suicide squeeze bunt single.

A second run was cut down at home on the bunt, but Marshall followed with an RBI double to right field for a 6-1 advantage.

Post 15 registered two runs with two outs in the bottom of the third, scoring after a crisp around-the-horn 5-4-3 double play from Lembo to Flanagan to Mendez.

Noel Seville singled, Alan Blackington walked and Brad Mahoney ripped a two-run double to right-center. Ryan Kearney then singled and stole second, but Wolcott escaped further damage by slipping a called third strike past Cassano on a 3-2 pitch.

Andover's final two runs came in the fourth when Harris singled, Lembo beat out yet another bunt, Flanagan singled to load the bases, and consecutive RBI fielder's choice grounders were stroked by Mendez and Dana McCann.

Lawrence, which had baserunners in every inning, capped the scoring in the bottom of the fifth. Seville doubled to left, Blackington singled and both raced home on separate Andover errors.

Post 8's final threat occurred in the seventh, but McCann and Allard were left aboard after drawing walks.

In the Lawrence half of the seventh, Kearney slapped a one-out single and Cesar Abad had a two-out single before Wolcott retired the final batter on a grounder to shortstop Todd Harris.

Flanagan went 3-for-4 and Marshall 2-for-3 to spark Andover's 10-hit attack.

Paul Allard continued his outstanding work behind the plate, ending each of the first two innings by cutting down a Lawrence runner on the bases.

Andover 13

Danvers 2

Post 8 exploded for 12 hits and 10 runs in the first two innings, turning this game into the first lopsided laugh of the season at the Andover High field.

Justin Connors (2-0) pitched the first three innings and didn't allow a hit. He whiffed the side in the opening stanza on 14 pitches, and left the game with six strikeouts and three walks.

Righthander Alex Marshall worked the next three innings, yielding four singles and two runs (neither earned) while fanning three and walking two.

Sixteen-year-old rookie righty Dave Salafia pitched the seventh, permitting one hit and walking two before starting a game-ending 1-2-3 double play.

Andover paraded 11 batters to the plate in the bottom of the first, taking a first inning 1-0 lead (Continued on page 14A)

Todd Harris is a champion on, and off, the field

By Rick Harrison

Todd Harris of Andover is on a snowballing athletic and academic roll.

Most recently, the 17-year-old Phillips Academy golden boy was named one of six Athletes-of-the-Year at PA and The Eagle-Tribune Male Athlete-of-the-Year in the same week.

The honors are richly deserved for the multi-talented and unpretentious Big Blue football-basketball-baseball standout, who carries his athletic glory and academic achievements with genuine modesty.

Todd is on a potentially dizzying ride that will never careen out of control because of his refreshing level-headedness.

He comes by his athletic prowess naturally, inheriting his competitiveness, determination and toughness from his dad, Frank "Red" Harris, who played hockey and football at Malden Catholic High and Boston College in the mid-1960s.

The Harris family, which includes mother, Bernadette, and older brother, Matt, who is a standout athlete in his own right, moved to Andover from Clifton Park, N.Y. in 1983.

Todd was only 6 at the time, but five years later he had blossomed into the 11-year-old starting shortstop (Red was an assistant coach) on the Andover National Little League All-Star team that defied the odds and won district, state and regional championships on the way to the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa.

Phelps scholarship

After graduation from Doherty Middle School, Todd was awarded one of a half-dozen Dick Phelps scholarships to attend the school on the hill. Phelps, a Phillips alum, is a multi-millionaire who contributes to the school annually.

"Todd and Phillips have been a perfect fit," said Red Harris. "It's been a tremendous experience from day one. There may have been some small reservations at the time, but we've never regretted the decision."

Todd, who recently completed his junior year at Phillips, is believed to be the first underclassman ever to receive Athlete-of-the-Year honors at the school.

If he isn't, he is at very least the first non-senior in more than two decades to be so-recognized at the tradition-rich prep school.

He is also one of few prep school athletes to receive The Eagle Tribune's highest sports award, which is usually reserved for a public school student. Harris was chosen from thousands of eligible candidates at the numerous schools within the newspaper's circulation area.

[Amy Broadhead of Brooks School in North Andover is the Tribune's Female Athlete-of-the-Year, and Becky Dowling of Washington state is also among PA's half-dozen recipients.]

The 5'9", 165-pound Harris is a rugged performer with outstanding instincts on the gridiron, hardwood and diamond.

He was a captain in football and basketball as a junior, and is a three-sport captain-elect for the 1994-'95 school year.

In football he rarely, if ever, leaves the field while playing wide receiver, defensive back and on special teams as a punt and kickoff returner.

He has lettered for Coach Leon Modeste's Big Blue varsity three straight years, and was named All-Prep last fall for a PA grid squad that finished 5-3 despite ending the season with a tough 28-21 loss to archrival Phillips Exeter.

Todd led the team in touchdowns last year with seven, had 42 receptions for close to 700 yards, and defensively he was second in interceptions.

Although his father played hockey, Todd gravitated toward basketball in the winter because there was no youth hockey in Clifton Park, N.Y.

He has played two years of varsity hoop for Coach Modeste at PA. As the Big Blue point guard, Todd has often been asked to defend against potential Division I college caliber players usually five or six inches taller. Still he has held his own at both ends of the court.

This past season, he averaged a shade over 11 points per game and was also among the leaders in assists and steals on a 15-8 team.

Baseball, which reportedly is Todd's favorite sport, has seen him earn All-Prep honors three consecutive years as the starting shortstop for the Phillips varsity.

His career batting average is over .400 and includes an eye-opening .455 average as a freshman, .360 mark as a sophomore and .418 average this past spring.

He was the number-two batter and top base-stealer in a PA lineup whose top three hitters were Mike Sullivan, Harris and Brian Flanagan, a dangerous trio at the plate and all Andover residents.

Coach Andy Cline's PA crew finished 14-4 this season, which started with a 10-9 victory over intra-town rival Andover High and ended with a loss to Deerfield Academy in the New England Prep School Tournament championship game.

Harris also helped Phillips to the New England Tournament baseball final as a freshman, and the semifinal round as a sophomore.

Todd's baseball season does not end with the last Big Blue game, however.

Last summer he hit close to .400 for the Andover Post 8 American Legion team, which finished 15-7-3 and qualified for the State Tournament's Elite Eight for the second straight year.

This season, despite a minor hamstring pull, he is batting leadoff for Post 8 and was once again hitting .400 (4-for-10) with a four-game hitting streak through last Saturday. The team was 4-0 at that point.

Last weekend, he was also named to the Bay State Games Northeast Scholastic Division baseball team, one of only two Andover residents selected.

Todd has little time to play golf, but despite that he has competed in the prestigious Rogers Junior Tournament and placed second in his division one year.

Academic All-Star

In the classroom, Todd is ranked among the top five percent at Phillips, which attracts super students from around the world.

As a sophomore he was awarded the Keyes Prize as the school's top student-athlete.

He will be secretary of the senior class next year, which is second only to the class president. (Rumor has it Todd could have been president had he not lost a coin flip to determine whether he or his best friend would run for the highest office.)

A peer tutor at Phillips, Harris scored close to 1,400 on his college board exams. The honors student is hoping to attend an Ivy League school with Harvard University and Dartmouth College at the top of his impressive list.

Todd intends to play baseball and maybe football as well in college.

He has great acumen in mathematics but, according to his father, is leaning more toward law or some related field other than engineering.

When Todd isn't following some athletic pursuit or grinding out the average four hours of homework meted out daily at PA, he is a voracious reader who loves Stephen King novels.

Sibling rivalry

Todd is not the only success story in the Harris household. Brother Matt, 20, is also compiling an enviable resume.

A standout basketball player, golfer and track-man at Andover High, Matt recently completed his sophomore year at the University of Massachusetts-Lowell where he is a finance major and a dean's list student.

Matt was the number-one golfer on the River Hawks' team, placing among the leaders in several big tournaments before capping the season by winning the Massachusetts Intercollegiate Individual Championships.

This summer, he will fine-tune his game even further at Long Meadow C.C. in Lowell.

Red Harris, who operated a sporting goods store in town for several years, was born in Malden. His wife, Bernadette, is originally from Medford.

Red played only one year (freshman) of hockey at Boston College, but as quarterback of the Eagles' football team, he (and later Mike Kruszek) held numerous BC records before an electrifying young man named Doug Flutie, and more recently Notre Dame conqueror, Glenn Foley, came along to rewrite the books.

The Harris family lives at 5 Embassy Lane.

Andover Legion Post 8 launches season with five wins

6-0 lead with the key strokes a two-run single by Brian Tisbert, long RBI double to right-center by Brian Flanagan, and run-producing singles by Jeff Lembo and Connors. Flanagan also scored on a throwing error.

In the four-run second session, Flanagan belted another solid two-bagger, Rick Mendez laced an RBI single, Dana McCann singled, Alex Marshall doubled and Connors helped himself again with a two-run opposite-field single to right.

Post 8 picked up an unearned run in the third frame, and completed the onslaught in the sixth when Matt Marvin walked, Tom Gardner doubled and Tim McGovern spanked a two-run single to center.

Powering the 16-hit offense with two safeties each were Flanagan, Gardner, McCann, Marshall and Connors.

Flanagan, Mendez and McCann also scored two runs apiece, while Dave Salafia lashed an infield hit.

Defensive standouts included third-baseman McGovern, who initiated the first of Post 8's two twin-killings, Chris Kearns at catcher and Hugh Quattlebaum at first base.

Todd Harris aggravated a hamstring pull while beating out an infield hit and stealing second base in the first inning, but the injury was not believed to be serious.

Andover Gold setting into Pony League pennant groove

By Rick Harrison

Andover Gold, which won seven league championships (four Greater Lawrence Babe Ruth League, three Suburban Pony League) in a nine-year period during the late 1970s and 1980s, appears to be settling into a pennant-contender groove this summer.

With apologies to both Gene Autry and Steven Tyler, Gold is back in the saddle again.

Manager Dan Grams' AG crew started its 1994 Suburban Pony League season with three straight victories over the North Andover Knights (9-7), Reading Astros (2-0) and two-time reigning league titlist Methuen Police (9-5).

Key hits by winning pitcher Marc O'Sullivan, Scott Ciruso and Steve Vickers ignited a four-run rally in the top of the fourth inning that propelled Andover Gold to the 9-7 victory over North Andover at the North Andover Middle School field.

A brilliant two-hit shutout by left-hander Dan Gosselin, and a game-breaking RBI double by O'Sullivan, ignited the tight triumph over Reading at Washington Park.

Methuen fell under the weight of a five-run Gold third inning, highlighted by Doug Henderson's two-run single and RBI doubles from O'Sullivan and Keith Grant at the Andover High field.

Gold carried its 3-0 record into the first of two regular-season games against intra-town archrival Andover Blue, which has dominated the series between the two teams in recent years. That game was scheduled for Tuesday night.

AG, also led by assistant coaches Leo Gravell, Paul Salafia and Bill Vickers, returns to action Saturday morning against Winthrop at Winthrop High (10 a.m.).

The league then takes a brief July 4 holiday break, with Gold returning to host the Wilmington Wildcats next Thursday (6 p.m.) and North Reading Braves on Saturday, July 9 (10 a.m.) at Andover High.

An earlier rained out game against Lowell will be made up at a later date as yet to be determined.

The four-run fourth-inning uprising snapped a 3-3 tie and gave Gold a lead it never relinquished.

O'Sullivan (1-0) pitched the first five innings en route to the win, and lefty Dan Gosselin worked two perfect innings in relief. Gosselin entered in the sixth, with two North Andover runs home and no one out, and proceeded to retire six straight batters en route to the save.

The pivotal AG fourth started with a single by Doug Henderson, a sacrifice bunt by Joe Maglio and a go-ahead RBI single by Scott Ciruso. Ciruso stole second, the next batter reached on a third-strike passed ball, and O'Sullivan ripped a two-run single. O'Sullivan stole second and raced across with the fourth run on Vickers' base hit.

Gosselin reached base four times with two singles and two walks, and he also had two stolen bases. Ciruso added two singles to the 11-hit assault, while other safeties were lashed by Keith Grant, Marc Tropeano, Matt Mahoney, O'Sullivan, Vickers, Henderson and Maglio.

Defensive standouts were third baseman Randy Romano, and the pitching tandem of O'Sullivan and Gosselin who combined for six assists on the mound.

Andover Gold 2 Reading Astros 0

Southpaw Dan Gosselin (1-0) was the major story in this game, as he outduelled a much larger and hard-throwing Reading pitcher en route to the complete-game victory.

Both hurlers allowed only two hits but Gold was able to scratch out a pair of runs. Marc O'Sullivan lashed an RBI double and Gosselin drove home the other AG run. Defensive standouts for the winners were Pat Annese and Joe Maglio.
